120 DIE IN FIERY CRASH

Babylift Begins in Disaster

. . . Tiny Fingers Frozen In Death

Times News Services

SAIGON — Tiny fingers clutched in death a woman's breast. The lifeless arms of the woman still gripped the corpse of the baby she evidently had tried to protect . . .

Headless bodies were buried in the mud. . . .

This was the crash site of the United States Air Force C-5A Galaxy transport that was to have carried 243 Vietnamese orphans to the United States today.

Flames still leapt from sections of the giant transport which two hours earlier had crashed with a thunderous roar.

Rescuers slogged through knee-deep mud and waist-high grass in search of survivors.

It was a tragedy of stunning proportions even in a nation that has seen more than its share of them in 30 years of war.

"I just can't talk," said one American woman who survived.

The sudden whoosh of air out of the cabin of the plane, the largest in the world, was the first sign of the imminent tragedy.

Air Force Sgt. Jim Hadley, a Sacramento, Calif., medical technician finishing two weeks of reserve training with a weekend flight to Saigon, knew right away the plane was in a decompression condition.

"You could see the hole in the back of the plane, you could see the sunlight streaming in.

"Things started flying around. Eyeglasses. Pens. Pieces of insulation tore off the ceiling. The pillows exploded. They were plastic lined.

"That went on for a little while until the air stopped. By then the oxygen masks had dropped down.

"There weren't enough oxygen masks. We had to keep moving them from kid to kid. We kept on our own because otherwise you get drowsy and then you go out."

★ Thieu Won't Quit

SAIGON (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu said today the South Vietnamese cabinet has resigned and a new government is being formed.

The change of government came after the Saigon regime claimed to have cracked the second plot in a week for a coup against Thieu.

There were increasing signs that Thieu, with U.S. backing, intended to fight all attempts to force him out of office.

U.S. Army Chief of Staff Gen. Frederick C. Weyand said he agrees fully with Thieu's military efforts despite massive setbacks to the South Vietnamese armed forces.

Weyand visited Nha Trang, 188 miles northeast of Saigon, last Saturday and said then: "I'm heartened by the performance of (South Vietnamese army) troops. The situation here appears stabilized. They're not demoralized in any sense of the word. We're in sort of a breather."

Two days later Nha Trang fell to the Communists. Civilians and soldiers fled the city and two other provincial capitals, giving them up without a fight.

Weyand, President Ford's personal envoy in South Vietnam for the past week, said that "The North Vietnamese army . . . can be defeated."

He told newsmen the Saigon government's abandonment

United States military sources said there is a "definite possibility" that sabotage may have caused the crash.

The plane was carrying 243 orphans ranging in age from eight months to 12 years, many of them fathered by U.S. servicemen who had served in Vietnam. Officials said about 100 orphans survived and that between 120 and 150 were killed.

Also aboard were 43 escorts from the U.S. mission in Saigon and eight air force crewmen.

The plane was 40 to 60 miles out of Saigon after takeoff when a rear cargo door blew out. This damaged the Galaxy's elevators as the plane flew at 31,000 feet.

The pilot, Maj. Dennis Traynor, turned back toward Tan Son Nyhut airbase but was unable to control the rate of descent and plunged to earth in a swampy area just outside the base. Ruptured fuel tanks burst into flames, sending up towers of smoke that could be seen in Saigon, six or seven miles away.

U.S. officials in Washington said they were dismayed by news of the crash but there were no plans to discontinue the flights.

It was the second incident of the day involving orphan flights. A Pan American world airways plane with 34 orphans aboard was grounded today in Guam by mechanical difficulties.

Military sources said the area of the crash site was 50 per cent controlled by the Viet Cong and there had been fighting in the area only Thursday night. Troops were rushed to the scene to secure the area as helicopters ferried out the dead and living.

"I saw 20 to 30 babies who survived carried out," said Dr. William Oldham, an American who is chief medical adviser to the government of Soth Vietnam.

"All those who survived must have been on the upper passenger deck. All those below in cargo section must have been killed."

"Many of those babies survived the crash beautifully," he said.

"I carried in one handicapped boy who still had his crutch and brace and all he said was he wanted to go potty."

A spokesman for the department of external affairs in Ottawa said 34 of the orphans had been destined for adoption in Canada.

The spokesman said "34 of those children were destined for Canadian families, and we have no information at all if some of these survived or if all were killed."

The controversial swept-wing Galaxy, the world's largest jet plane, had been delayed by mechanical problems on its departure earlier today from Clark Air Force Base in the Philippines. It was to have flown back to Clark for 48 hours of medical treatment of the orphans before flying on to Travis AFB, Calif. where Ford personally had planned to meet it.

The two-decker plane may have been carrying more passengers than ever had been attempted.

Inflation Mechanism Unchanging

By WILLIAM REES-MOGG, Times of London editor

The circumstances which predispose a society to inflation are of a varied and complex kind. There is therefore room for many views about the ultimate causes of inflation, and these views may all have some truth in them. They remain very confusing to the public, which feels that inflation is an abstract subject on which the economists themselves disagree. There is still more disagreement among politicians, some of whom have no proper understanding of the subject, all of whom are subject to political pressures, often to do the wrong thing.

I am convinced, have become convinced, that there is a single mechanism of inflation, which can be isolated and described. I do not take the view that this mechanism, which is a monetary one, operates in a vacuum. It is subject to external, non-monetary influences in its inception and at every stage of its progression. Nevertheless, there is one difference between the mechanism and the influences from outside. The mechanism is always the same. A monetary account of any inflation always shows the same pattern of operation. The outside factors are often quite different.

One can see this both historically and geographically. In the French inflation of the 1790s the prime non-monetary force was the French Revolution and the hazards that it faced; in the German inflation of 1921 to 1923 the prime non-monetary force was the reparations question and the French occupation of the Ruhr; in the German inflation after 1945 the prime non-monetary force was defeat; in the current British inflation it is trade union power. In all these inflations the basic monetary pattern has been the same.

Currently one can make the same point geographically: Japan, Italy, France, Britain and the United States are all suffering severe inflation. The non-monetary factors, mainly trade union power and oil price movements (in so far as those are regarded as political and monopolistic) differ very much from country to country. The temptation to blame oil prices is probably at its highest in Japan.

This distinction between an unchanging mechanism of inflation and changing political forces seems to me to be crucial. If one can master the mechanism, then one can master inflation; yet if the mechanism is brought into operation by political forces, one will only be allowed to master the mechanism if one can also master or bring under persuasion the political forces.

If this view is correct it follows first of all that any non-monetary approach will fail. For instance, the recent Conservative attempt in Britain to combine inflationary monetary policies with control of inflatian by non-monetary means was bound to be self-defeating. Yet at the same time the simplistic monetary view that it is possible by monetary means alone to control inflation is erroneous. Governments inflate because they feel that they have no political alternative but to inflate. They may or may not understand the dangers of inflating, but they act as they do in response to political forces. Those forces cannot simply be disregarded. Apart from anything else, in a democracy those forces may express themselves in an election victory for another party.

My views of the causes of inflation are not original; they belong indeed to the broad tradition of monetary economics. Nevertheless they represent a view of the character in inflation which is not universally accepted.

Bridge Pickets Ready to Talk

Striking civic employees today said they are willing to co-operate to avoid industrial layoffs or a Labor Relations Board order arising from closure of Johnson Street bridge lift span.

The possibility of production shutdown at B.C. Forest Products Ltd. sawmill and curtailment of plywood runs at its adjoining mill on Selkirk Water was raised this morning by BCFP manager Walter Nelson, who said an order may be sought to curtail picketing of the bridge.

Jim Walker, president of Local 50 Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the union was meeting this afternoon with BCFP, Smith Cedar Products and Butler-Lafarge to discuss the bridge closure.

"We can co-operate with reasonable people," Walker said.

Nelson said the company has chip scows waiting to be towed out of the harbor and some 20 railway cars of lumber and plywood ready for rail barge transport by way of Canadian National Railways Pt. Ellice ferry dock.

Shipping in the upper harbor is trapped by the lift span which pickets refuse to leave to allow operation of the span.

Court Restricts Book Salesmen

A temporary injunction against specific door-to-door sales practices of an encyclopedia company has been issued by the B.C. Supreme Court.

It marks the first time in Canada a government has joined with a consumer association to seek and obtain a court order stopping a certain type of business practice.

The provincial department of consumer services announced today the specific terms of the temporary injunction against P. F. Collier and Son Ltd. following the March 26 decision of the Supreme Court in Kelowna.

The action against the company, publishers of Colliers' Encyclopedia, was launched by the Kelowna branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada with the support of B.C.'s director of trade practices.

The court ruled that prima facie proof had been established that Colliers' sales presentation was capable of deceiving consumers and therefore violated the B.C. Trade Practices Act.

Several deceptive practices were alleged in the action and the court granted the temporary injunction against two specific practices employed by Colliers.

Those practices, according to the consumer services department announcement, involved the failure of salesmen to disclose immediately that the purpose of their door-to-door calls was for the sales of an encyclopedia. Customers were apparently led to believe the purpose was for something else.

Also it was charged the salesmen did not give enough emphasis to the full and complete price of their sales items, quoting instead a cost per day price.

$20M FREE LOAN GRANTED TO BCR

B.C. Railway has been granted a $20 million interest-free loan from the provincial government.

Premier Barrett said Thursday a cabinet order, passed during the day, gives the railway money to cover financial requirements until new legislation extending BCR's borrowing power is approved by the legislature.

That bill, now before the house, would expand BCR's borrowing capacity from $440 million to $650 million.

But the legislation may not be passed for several weeks and Barrett said the money is needed immediately.

Those funds, plus another $15 million granted the railway in January to cover operating losses incurred by the seven-week rail strike last year, must be paid back to the government as soon as the legislation is passed and it can borrow the money through regular channels.

Barrett has promised the legislature a full report and financial statement on the railway later this session.

Costs May Force B.C. Tel Layoff

B.C. Tel will lay off some staff in all major centres in the province, including Victoria, starting May 15, a company spokesman said today.

The layoffs will affect those in the lowest seniority categories.

Ken Horodyski, spokesman for B.C. Tel in Victoria, said the layoffs were necessary because of increasing costs.

A conciliation officer's report awarding B.C. Tel's 14,000 employees an 18 per cent pay increase this year and 14 per cent in 1976 would add $2.8 million to the labor bill in this year alone, Horodyski said.

The report is being studied by the company. Part of the report has been accepted by B.C. Tel but the pay award has not been dealt with by the company.

The employees, members of the B.C. Federation of Telephone Workers, are currently voting on whether to accept the report.

Snowstorm Rampages East to Halifax

Times News Services

Southeastern Canada today dug out from an April blizzard which paralyzed air and ground traffic and was blamed for at least five highway deaths.

The weather bureau said the spring snowstorm, which Thursday lashed southern Ontario and Quebec with winds up to 50 miles an hour, dumped the winter's highest accumulation of snow over the region. Eighteen inches of snow fell in some areas of Ontario and Montreal was showered with 11.3 inches.

In Halifax, tugs were standing by the gypsum-carrier Colin Brown early today after the vessel went aground in the harbor approaches during the violent storm.

Elsewhere in the Maritimes, Saint John, N.B., reported one inch of snow as the storm reached New Brunswick where between five and 10 inches are expected before the disturbance passes.

Winds gusting to 40 m.p.h. accompanied the storm and police said roads in the Woodstock and Florenceville areas of northern New Brunswick were almost impassable.

"If you didn't have it tied down," said a New Jersey policeman, "you didn't have it this morning."

as 60-mile-an-hour winds whipped up five-foot snow drifts, caused flooding and some evacuation along coastal and river areas, left thousands without electricity and forced cancellation of school classes.

In Maine, downed lines caused power blackouts in parts or all of 11 communities. Waves crested at 25 feet and wind whipped seas knocked down the south wall at the Portland Head lighthouse at Cape Elizabeth, an 18th century relic.

Back in Ontario, Toronto International Airport shut down at 4:30 p.m. Thursday. Air Canada ran into problems because of a lack of glycol — a chemical used to prevent icing on plane wings — when trucks with additional supplies from Sarnia, Ont., were delayed by snow-clogged highways.

Airports at both London, Ont., and Windsor, Ont., were forced to close.

Although Manitoba escaped the worst of the storm, many passengers were stranded at the Winnipeg International Airport because of the airports in Toronto and Montreal were not operating.

In Toronto, the roads and maintenance department was caught by surprise when the storm hit and most of its sanding and salting equipment was put away for the winter.

Until the storm, Toronto had saved about $1.2 million in snowclearing operations because of a light winter but a spokesman said the storm will "knock the hell out of that."

The storm also staggered the Chicago area with up to a foot of snow before swirling eastward.

Hundreds of travellers on the Pennsylvania Turnpike spent Thursday night in Somerset because of hazardous driving conditions. About 1,500 were put up in eight churches when motels became filled.

The wind whipped up waves as high as 12 feet on Lake Erie off northern Pennsylvania. It also shattered the third-floor windows of a downtown Erie building and lifted off the roof.

The 24-hour closing of Chicago's O'Hare International Airport caused problems as far away as Pittsburgh, where hundreds of travellers were stranded because flights were diverted there from Chicago.

Jobless in U.S. Hits 8,000,000

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Unemployment in the U.S. soared to 8.7 per cent in March, a jump of 0.5 per cent that meant nearly 8 million Americans were jobless, the government said today.

The employment figures were released as other statistics showed that wholesale prices declined in March for the forth successive month, ending the U.S. double-digit inflation, at least for the present.

Unemployment increased by 500,000 during March, and 3.1 million over last August, according to statistics released by the labor department. The rate was its highest level since 1941.

The large increase was expected after President Ford predicted in San Diego Thursday there would be "some discouraging unemployment figures," and Treasury Secretary William Simon predicted joblessness would hit 9 per cent by summer.

It was the third consecutive month the unemployment rate has been above 8 per cent. In January and February it was 8.2 per cent.

The jobless rate for blue collar workers rose from 10.9 per cent in February to a record 12.5 per cent in March. The unemployment rate for construction workers rose sharply from 15.9 per cent in February to 18.1 per cent in March and the rate for manufacturing workers rose for the 10th consecutive month to 11.4 per cent.

One out of every five teenagers was out of work, and the jobless rate for non-white workers was 14.2 per cent. The rate for all adult men was 6.8 per cent, and it was 5.8 per cent for heads of households.

The government data on the job situation also included information about so-called hidden unemployment. Counted in this category are those persons so discouraged they no longer are looking for jobs. They numbered 1.1 million, the highest recorded since the government began collecting data in this category in 1967.

On the price decline the department of labor reported Thursday that its wholesale index fell 0.6 per cent in March, after declining 0.8 per cent in February. In the three months that ended in March, wholesale prices were falling at an annual rate of 6.7 per cent. A year ago they were climbing at a 24.5 per cent pace.

Since November, when wholesale prices began to turn down, the index has declined 2.2 per cent. That is the biggest four-month drop in wholesale prices since 1951, according to labor department analysts.

the weather

A weak disturbance lying mainly over the B.C. coast was still causing some cloudiness and a few showers of rain or wet snow this morning over coastal regions and a few snowflurries across the interior mainly over the north country. As this weak disturbance moves slowly southeastward and continues to weaken gradual improvement is forecast in the weather over most forecast regions today and Saturday. However a few snowflurries will still linger over the northern interior.

SUCCESSFUL END SEEN IN SEARCH

By means of an underwater television camera, private salvage company officials were hoping today to confirm what they believe to be the location of four tank cars full of liquid chlorine which fell off a barge and sank in Georgia Strait Feb. 19.

Seaspan International vice-president Capt. Dick Tolhurst said the lowering of the camera calls for precision, and any motion on the surface vessel could hamper the work. But today's weather conditions appeared "promising," he said.

Tolhurst had said earlier that the search for the sunken tank cars would be called off today unless funds were forth coming from the Ministry of Transport or some other source.

But today he indicated that search vessels would remain at the spot — which he declined to identify — until a decision on possible salvage attempts is made by the four firms involved.

COVER STORY

It's everything you ever wanted in a decorator finish. Benjamin Moore's Aquavelvet is a low-sheen interior latex enamel that covers most surfaces with just one coat. So you spend less time painting and more time admiring the results.

Aquavelvet is good value. It's specially formulated to spread evenly over large areas to give you a good looking decor at reasonable cost.

Aquavelvet dries fast. You can paint in the morning and have a beautiful room in the afternoon, with a velvety surface that's easy to keep clean.

When you think about it, the Aquavelvet story turns out to be more than a cover story. It's a clean story you can spread around, with a beautiful, decorative finish.

Connally Trial Told of $10,000 'Gift'

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Texas lawyer Jake Jacobsen told a federal jury Thursday that on two occasions in 1971 he handed $5,000 in $100 bills to then Connally in his Capitol Hill office.

The payments, which Jacobsen said Connally acknowledged with a "thank you," were paid upon Connally's request by a large dairy co-op for his role in urging a rise in the milk price support level that year, Jacobsen testified.

Testifying under Connally's steady, scowling gaze, Jacobsen said he paid the $10,000 in cash provided by the Associated Milk Producers Inc. in two installments, on May 14 and Sept. 24, 1971.

"He told me how helpful he had been in getting the price support decision and that he understood AMPI was raising a lot of money for political contributions," Jacobsen, then an AMPI lawyer, testified.

"He said in effect, why didn't I get them to raise a little money for him."

Jacobsen said he decided himself $10,000 would be an appropriate sum, neither too stingy nor so blatant as to make it appear "we bought the (milk support) decision."

He said he presented Connally the AMPI cash on the two dates, breaking it into two payments "to get more credit for it."

Jacobsen said that in 1973 he and Connally conspired to cover up the alleged bribery after Watergate investigators got wind of it through testimony by an official of the milk producers.

Jacobsen said Connally, wearing rubber gloves, handed him a cigar box containing $10,000 at a meeting in Connally's Houston law office and that Jacobsen agreed to put it in his Austin bank vault and claim that the $10,000 had never left the vault.

Jacobsen and Connally both testified in 1973 and 1974 that Jacobsen had offered Connally $10,000 for political use but that Connally had turned it down and that the money had stayed in Jacobsen's bank vault.

Connally still swears that story is true. Jacobsen says it is a lie.

GEAR SLIP BLAMED

A faulty gearshift lever caused a cab to run over its driver, coroner Edmond St. Jorre has concluded following an inquiry into the March 21 accident.

St. Jorre said Mrs. Dianne Mae Tremeer, 33, of 3254 Alder, died accidentally when her taxi slipped into reverse gear as she walked behind it after helping an elderly man into the front passenger seat.

The accident occurred in front of the James Bay Lodge, 336 Simcoe.

He said Mrs. Tremeer pushed against the rear of the taxi in an apparent attempt to stop it, but she was shoved back toward the lodge. She tripped and the taxi pinned her head between the rear bumper and the building. He said she died almost instantly.

The coroner said Victoria police and a mechanic had conducted several experiments on the vehicle which showed the gearshift lever did not always lock when put into the park position.

Because of the defect, the transmission would move, on occasion, from park into reverse when the front passenger door was closed.

HEDGEHOGS ON DIET

GLOUCESTER, England (UPI) — Six schoolgirls will eat sparrows, starlings, hedgehogs and mice for a week to find out if they can survive.

"If things come to the crunch in the world and we all have to fall back on natural resources," said Peter Driver, a biology instructor at the girls' high school. "We need to know what can be eaten and how to catch and kill it."

Crash Probe Extended

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Legal action was ordered Thursday in an attempt to get testimony from reluctant witnesses for an inquest into the Oct. 30 crash of a Panarctic Oils Ltd. Lockheed Electra which claimed 32 lives.

The inquest has been frustrated in attempts to get testimony from a number of witnesses, including the plane's co-pilot David Hatton and flight engineer Gary Weyman, the only survivors.

The witnesses live outside the North West Territories beyond the jurisdiction of the inquest and have refused to appear voluntarily.

Thursday, Coroner Walter England instructed Crown lawyer Ed Brogden to ask supreme courts in British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan, the provinces where the witness reside, to establish commissions to hear relevant testimony. The legal manoeuvering may take six months, forcing an adjournment of the inquest.

Mr. Brogden said the ministry of transport has asked for a federal inquiry into the crash which would not be limited in either jurisdiction or scope.

CUPE Ready to Discuss Compromise on Bridge

Canadian National said there are about 30 loaded railway cars standing on Inner Harbor sidings waiting for loading on the car barge, while on the mainland there are 50-60 loaded cars at Port Mann containing goods destined for Victoria and up-Island points.

The cars waiting to load at Pt. Ellice could be re-routed via E and N Railway trackage and carried to the mainland by way of CP Rail ferry at Nanaimo, but to re-route them back to CN would be too costly, a CN freight spokesman said.

Nelson said the railways are reluctant to re-route traffic twice, but some BCFP shipments are being re-routed where they can reach their destinations by way of CP Rail.

Normally, CN freight uses Pt. Ellice ferry landing five days a week for regularly scheduled barges. For the last three days the bridge has not opened because of picketing, repeating a previous situation that existed several days until police arrested two Canadian Union of Public Employees pickets.

The Johnson Street railway span, carrying E and N tracks across the harbor, has been out of service for weeks.

Nelson said BCFP is trying to run as much of its dual-mill operation as normally as possible, but it has had to handle mill waste by truck service instead of chip scows, and the trucks are working to capacity.

The sawmill is most vulnerable to shutdown, he said. It had 500 employees working 2½ shifts, while the plywood mill has 250 workers.

"We go to the board (LRB) with reluctance, but if that's what we have to do to keep our people working, then that's what we'll do," he said.

BUSINESS LESSON THE HARD WAY

For Mrs. Currie it was a new venture, an opportunity to try something different.

However at 1:30 a.m. today she was awakened by Esquimalt police and informed her store had been broken into.

Further investigation revealed a box containing slightly more than $600 hidden in a back room and between 12 to 15 cartons of cigarettes were missing.

Police determined the thieves had entered through an air vent in the roof, kicked out some ceiling tiles and dropped 10 feet to a display counter. As they left by a rear door they tripped an alarm.

Mrs. Currie said normally she takes the day's receipts to the bank when closing up, but Thursday night she had a backache so didn't bother.

She said she had realized some of the dangers of being a small-shop owner. Only 11 days before she took over the store a young man wielding a knife held up a clerk and ran off with $100.

"With all the holdups in this area lately I have been warning my staff to be careful," she said. "But I never thought about a break-in. I never throught it would happen to me."

She said she was uncertain if the loss was covered by insurance.

More Charges Facing Suspect in Break-Ins

William Harold Mack, charged Thursday with three armed robberies in the Greater Victoria area in recent weeks, faced two new charges in Victoria provincial court this morning.

Mack, 26, was charged with escaping from William Head federal prison March 16 and with being unlawfully at large. He was remanded in custody to next Thursday for election of trial method and plea.

William Wallace Woods, 26, of 1249 Rockland charged jointly with Mack in connection with the holdup Wednesday afternoon of the Valu-Way Food Market, 101 Burnside, also appeared and bail was set at $1,000 with one or more sureties.

He elected trial by judge and jury and was remanded to next Thrsday to fix a date for preliminary hearing.

Colwood RCMP said Mack and another man, Michael William Morris, 24, escaped from William Head early in the morning of March 16.

Morris was captured in Saskatoon Monday, pleaded guilty to an armed robbery in that city and has been sentenced to three years in the Prince Albert penitentiary.

Time to Climb Down

Like a state of siege, the 2½-month dispute between area municipalities and the Canadian Union of Public Employees threatens to go on and on, seemingly forever.

Caught in the crossfire, a resigned public seems to have uncomplainingly accepted the fact that there is no garbage pick-up, that ice rinks and swimming pools are shut, that the Johnson Street bridge is subject to unexpected closures, that parks and boulevards are bedraggled and sidewalks littered, that many schools are providing only skeletal service while teachers earn full pay. And a hundred other inconveniences.

Perhaps this widespread attitude of makeshift and make-do — disposing of one's own garbage, driving the long way round, stepping over the rubbish on the sidewalk, accepting the long delays in getting any licences or permits — is one of the reasons the dispute has dragged on so long. Aside from the intransigence of CUPE and the stubbornness of the municipalities, the complacence of most residents of the Victoria region has in part been responsible for the unprecedented length of the current strike-lockout.

Who cares, we'll get along without, seems to be the prevailing attitude.

And so in confidence, CUPE escalates its tactics and the municipalities stonewall. In all probability, as Mayor Peter Pollen has said smugly, the circle won't be broken until June or even later.

Instead of acting like stoics, residents and homeowners, parents of school-age children, swimmers and skaters, all should kick and scream about the lack of essential services, write letters to their respective mayors, the regional board, the various CUPE locals, telephone them at home, attend council meetings en masse. In short, bombard union leaders and elected officials with a simple message — settle the mess.

The shutdown has gone beyond being an ordinary labor-management dispute, and each side long ago forfeited the usual public accord and hands-off attitude while the two sides grapple. Public opinion is far from powerless in this affair, and if enough "innocent bystanders" make enough noise, CUPE, the municipalities, or finally, the provincial government, will be prodded into settling the dispute.

That said, regional board chairman Jim Campbell should be faulted for his feeble explanation of the region's rejection — for the second time — of an industrial inquiry commission investigation into the dispute. In Campbell's reasoning, the commissioner would just step in and split the difference in the last wage positions of either side and impose that as a settlement.

It's hardly so simple. In almost all cases where the new feature of B.C. labor law has been invoked, the commissioner worked to get a voluntary settlement. Of course always in the background, is the commissioner's power to impose a compulsory settlement, but this has been used sparingly. He doesn't just split the difference in wage offers, he works to get what is considered reasonable.

As for Campbell's claim that if the municipalities find the commissioner's report unacceptable, they won't be able, politically, to reject it while CUPE can accept or reject as it likes — that's specious reasoning. The municipalities will have walked the final mile, and the public may judge the reasonableness of any proposed settlement. Considering CUPE's acceptance of 17 per cent in one year for school board outside workers in Vancouver, the 13.5 per cent federal blue collar workers accepted, it's hardly plausible the commissioner will go for CUPE's steep 46 per cent.

It's time the municipalities climbed down on the question of an industrial inquiry commission, and at least met CUPE halfway.

"... we're looking for a good investment under $300 ... what's our best bet ...?"

Cruel and Unusual Punishment

NEW YORK — The U.S. supreme court is about to take up the question of the death penalty again, since it failed to settle the matter with its 1972 ruling (in the so-called Furman case) that capital punishment was too arbitrarily and capriciously imposed to be constitutional.

This limited ruling caused 31 states to move — either through legislation or state court rulings — to circumvent the Furman decision and retain capital punishment. The result of these state actions in that there are now 207 persons under sentence of death in 19 states.

Obviously, if the supreme court intends to prohibit the death penalty, which is not altogether clear, it will have to go beyond the Furman ruling, perhaps to find the death penalty "cruel and unusual punishment," which is barred by the eighth amendment to the U.S. constitution.

207 On Death Row

The California supreme court, in ruling that capital punishment violated that state's constitution, rather convincingly demonstrated that the death penalty is "unusual." The court pointed out that while public hangings and the like had once been familiar sights in California, executions had by 1972 become rare indeed — two since 1963, none since 1967, with 80 per cent of all those eligible for the death penalty being sentenced to life imprisonment instead. In the entire U.S., the number of executions had dropped steadily — from 199 in 1935 to 56 in 1960 to two in 1967 and none since.

Those figures, the California court concluded, meant that however the death penalty might be approved in the abstract, it would not be "acceptable to an informed public where it evenhandedly applied to a substantial proportion of the persons potentially subject to execution."

If the federal supreme court adopted that reasoning, it could logically go on to the conclusion that the death penalty is also cruel. To sentence people to death, then to put them through long agonies of waiting and uncertainty during lengthy appeals and legal manoeuvring, only in the end to grant reprieve — or perhaps not — is a process of the greatest inhumanity, even in advance of actual execution.

Consider, for example, those 207 persons sent to death row since the Furman decision. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People legal defence fund, which closely monitors these cases, believes none of them are in near danger of execution. But a man — or either of the two women among the 207 — under sentence of death is unlikely to be sure of that. In North Carolina, where at the end of November, 65 persons were on death row. Governor Holshouser has indicated he will not permit an execution but he will not always be in office, and that kind of "assurance," too, is small comfort to those who wait for death or reprieve. The agonizing uncertainty the death penalty engenders is in itself cruel, uncivilized and unworthy of a generous people.

LUCIOUS JACKSON
... on death row in Georgia

But the supreme court need not necessarily move in that direction to find the death penalty unconstitutional. It could as soundly rule that the unassailable record shows capital punishment to be racially discriminatory.

The legal defence fund estimates that 60 per cent of those now on death row are black. On Nov. 29, of the 185 persons then under the death penalty, 107 were black. Nor is that disproportion anything new, or a temporary phenomenon.

From 1930 to 1967, blacks never made up more than 11.1 per cent of the U.S. population, or 24 per cent of that in the south. But a brief of the National Alliance Against Racist and Political Repression shows that 48.8 per cent of those executed in the United States in that time span, and 67.5 per cent of those put to death in the south, were black. Even when the total of executions declined drastically in the 1960s 43.9 per cent of all those gassed or electrocuted were black (as were 60.8 per cent in the south).

Even reprieve is discriminatory — of those sentenced to death in North Carolina from 1919 to 1954, less than half the whites but 62 per cent of the blacks were executed. In Pennsylvania, from 1914 to 1958, three times more white than black murderers had their death sentences commuted.

Actually, if similar figures were available, they would show an even greater disproportion of poor people, of whatever race, being executed. But a more sophisticated case has been made by Charles L. Black Jr., the distinguished Yale legal scholar, in his book Capital Punishment: The Inevitability of Caprice and Mistake.

Capricious, Arbitrary

Black argues that it is established legal doctrine that "certainty and fixity of standards" of due process and more stringently required as penalties become more serious; and that western civilization "has for centuries unambiguously, and with good reason, looked on death as a more serious penalty than imprisonment."

Therefore, the highest standards of due process are required for the conduct of cases that could result in the death penalty. But Black argues that the American criminal justice system, from arrest through sentencing to execution is so liable to error, caprice, arbitrariness, prejudice and uncontrolled discretion that in capital cases it is incapable of standards sufficiently rigid to justify the terrible decision between life and death.

"Our system of administering criminal justice," Black wrote, in words the supreme court surely will ponder well, "simply will not decently do as a system for separating out those who are to die."

Metric Shoals Ahead for Gov't

OTTAWA — In the course of the debate on metric conversion New Democrat MP Arnold Peters put the exasperated question. What the hell is Celsius? It is one that the federal government should take seriously because it has very great implications and is likely to acquire a high, thoroughly bicultural, emotional content.

Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Alastair Gillespie asked the House of Commons to approve by resolution the Government's program of guideline dates for metric conversion. As Liberal MP Herb Gray unkindly noted, the resolution did not include any dates and those in the program are not specific. We are moving, in splendidly theoretical fashion, from white paper to pilot project to consensus, passing in this process through the officially ordained stages of investigation, planning, scheduling and implementation. There will be some agony too and more than Celsius will be involved in it.

As most of the world uses the metric system and has done so for a very long time without notable injury to hold-outs, such as Canada and the United States, the government is persuaded that we shall benefit in the long run from conversion. This may be true. The situation is certainly changing as a result of forces set in motion by Britain's membership in the Common Market.

All Metric by 1980

Conversion will involve high costs (almost certainly underestimated) but the government takes comfort in the thought that these will be relatively painless, being spread over a period of time. Note, however, that the process is to be substantially completed by 1980, which is not so far away. This means that we will be heavily involved at an unfortunate time because our costs are already advancing at a very disturbing pace.

The government dismisses, in the same dangerously casual fashion, the prospective strains on the national temper. "We expect," said Gillespie, "that consumers will gradually become accustomed to metric measures as products and services are increasingly made available in metric units." Such is the general goodwill up to this point that the minister feels able to go beyond soothing assurances to exhortation.

"It is the utmost importance that all Canadians move in concert to maintain the momentum of the four-phase program."

There are risks in over-confidence. Mr. Gillespie has yet to hear from Canadian housewives moving in concert, with their electronic calculators, down the aisles of the supermarkets, none too sure of what is happening but deeply suspicious of its impact on their pocket books.

The assumption of the program seems to be that the system will simply absorb the costs. Understandably, the government is pleased with the philosophic reaction of big industry or most of it, which may be expected to demonstrate its usual efficiency in shifting costs to consumers. Gillespie had nothing to say, however, about the problems of craftsmen, such as carpenters and machinists, whose workshops represent a considerable investment in tools of all sorts which are about to become obsolete. Nor did he consider the waste that will be involved in the transitional period. For example, in the application by annoyed citizens of beautiful, new, metrically-measured panels to traditionally-spaced studs.

The serious dangers in the situation were sharply drawn to Gillespie's attention in an effective speech by the former Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister, Herb Gray. As we do most of our foreign business with the United States, it would seem ordinary common sense in this important matter to leave the timing to the customers. The government appears to have moved ahead of them and parliament is now asked to approve guidelines which reflect the pioneering efforts of the Metric Commission. But they could also, if there is American footdragging, work some injury to our trade.

There is a second and obvious danger that metric conversion will afford a convenient camouflage for price increases. Simple as the metric tables are, conversion is extremely complicated. Even if the shopper prudently carries with her a little card of metric equivalents, it is minor consolation to know that one pound is .454 kilos. The bleak reality is that few people can do such sums in their heads. It will, accordingly, be very easy to conceal price increases and a general atmosphere of suspicion is almost bound to develop.

The Conservative critic, Bill Kempling (Halton-Wentworth) voiced a similar warning, citing as evidence the recent experience with conversion in Britain.

In reviewing what has happened to date, Gray showed that the government has treated parliament in a rather casual fashion. While it can claim support in principle for eventual conversion to the metric system, it has in fact accorded the Metric Commission a role beyond anything set out in the white paper. That body was to advise and to co-ordinate overall planning but it is now overseeing the implementation of the conversion process.

Exception to Procedure

Gray took exception also to the procedure now being followed. What is being done will be sanctioned by a simple, although vague, resolution. This, unlike legislation, will not have legal force. Such a procedure is open to the more immediate criticism that it limits parliamentary consideration. There is no opportunity for committee study, for questioning the responsible minister or his officials, or representatives of interest groups.

In other words a favorable vote is being sought when the serious questions are unanswered. How much consideration has gone into these indicated dates? What cost estimates, if any, does the government possess? In the absence of a clear lead from the United States, what are the implications for the automobile and related industries which are integrated with the continental market? What plans, if any, have been developed for assistance to craftsmen and small business. How are consumers to be protected against camouflaged price increases?

The government would be foolish to ignore such criticisms or to assume that its troubles will be over when people stop asking — what the hell is Celsius? It is not so long since a proposal for time changes aroused enough farmer resentment in western Canada to threaten a provincial administration. Weights and measures affect far more people and probably in more important ways. Metric conversion may be splendid in the long run. Unless the government proceeds with caution and wisdom, however it may well drag the cabinet into a sea of troubles in the years immediately ahead.

Cat Mystery

We are wondering if the driver of the car which stopped on Central Avenue going west between Island Road and Transit Road, early in the morning March 29 accidentally hit a black cat with white markings on front and all four paws. If so would she or he please telephone 598-1134, in order to clear up the mystery of its death on Monday and oblige the owners.—Winifred M. Ockenden, 2436 Central Avenue.

Public Television

British Columbians who would like to see their province have a genuine public television service, or who support the CBC in its efforts to extend its service, should make their voices heard by writing or wiring to Pierre Juneau, chairman, Canadian Radio-Television Commission, 100 Metcalfe Street, Ottawa, Ontario.

The issue centres around the allocation of Channel 10 in the Vancouver-Victoria region. Channel 10 is the last VHF (Very High Frequency) channel available in the area. VHF has certain transmission advantages over UHF (Ultra High Frequency), which is yet to be used in British Columbia.

Many people in B.C. would like to see Channel 10 reserved for a provincially-funded education television service — the first station of a non-commercial educational and community programming network to serve all parts of the province. Indeed, they don't see the need, or desirability, of any new commercial licence, no matter what channel it might occupy.

The CBC would like Channel 10 for a proper station in Victoria, serving also the rest of Vancouver Island, the Gulf Islands and the Sechelt Peninsula. The French-language community would like the channel for the forthcoming CBC French-language service (the first French-language station of any kind). Both of these demands are also legitimate ones.

The Association for Public Broadcasting in British Columbia, for its part, has long been making the general argument for non-commercial television of all kinds, whether it be a decommercialized CBC, an educational service, or a new, British Columbia oriented general programming system.

At present, the only public broadcasting available to British Columbians comes from the United States, on a VHF channel as it happens. Public broadcasting done by Canadians for Canadians should have priority in licensing in the province.

At the same time, three commercial parties have applied for the Channel 10 licence. A fourth has applied for a UHF licence. The CRTC will be considering these applications, along with requests that Channel 10 be reserved for non-commercial or CBC use, and interventions against the commercial applications, at a hearing in Vancouver April 22.

Letters and telegrams to the commission should be sent before then, preferably to be received in Ottawa by April 7. —Herschel Hardin, president, Association for Public Broadcasting in B.C., P.O. Box 48596, Vancouver.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of April 4, 1915

HAVANA — Jess Willard, the Kansas cowboy, is the new heavyweight champion pugilist of the world. He knocked out Jack Johnson, the black champion, in the 26th round of their scheduled 45-round championship bout here. The knockout was a terrific right swing to Johnson's jaw. It was Johnson's fight all the way up to the 22nd round, when his vitality left him because of the hard pace which he carried throughout the early rounds. Seventeen thousand persons saw the combat, and when Johnson crumpled upon the floor with the knockout punch, the crowd burst into the ring and had to be cleared by soldiers.

As Kuwait 'Opens to West' Forgotten Women Wait For Veils to Lift

By MANUEL MEJIDO

Kuwait, December, 1974: The Government of this country is buying, at whatever price and from whatever source it can find, the most advanced educational technology. More than 2,000 scholarship students are taking specialized courses abroad on monthly scholarship payments of a minimum of $300 and the best instructors of the Arab world are imported to teach here. But coeducational instruction has not yet reached the Kuwait classrooms, where rigid separation between male and female students is still practiced.

For women there are courses in all fields such as pharmacology, biology, and nursing. Yet women here are still a long way from attaining equal rights, despite the apparent "opening to the West" by the Emirate. In two of the Capital's four movie theatres the orchestra seats in the right-hand section are reserved for families — that is, women with their husbands — while those in the left-hand section are exclusively for men and boys. To set a pair of sweethearts next to one another would be "scandalous" and so far it has never happened. In the cafes the lower level is occupied by men, while the upper level is reserved for families. It is absolutely inconceivable that a woman would go out to a cafe unaccompanied by a male.

In this country it is still a serious misdemeanor for a young unmarried woman to take a walk with a man. What life is really like for the women of Kuwait in this age is best illustrated by a news item which appeared in the Kuwait Times of Dec. 14: "A father slashed the throat of his twenty-one-year-old daughter because he saw her in the company of three young men and then killed himself in the same manner."

However, Dr. Mohamed Al Zaani, Deputy Minister of Education, contends that "the law of the land stipulates that education must be conducted in accordance with the tenets of Islam. Children are taught in school to respect their parents, to preserve the unity of the family, and to maintain a close relationship with their relatives. In this respect we make no distinction between males and females. Clearly most Kuwait citizens observe and respect traditions."

Indeed they do. None of the numerous and varied businesses here employs local women. If an occasional female clerk is to be seen in a bank, an airline office, or a store, she will most certainly have come from Palestine, Iraq, Pakistan, India, Iran, or some other country in the Arab world. Native Kuwait women go out to the streets only in the company of their husbands, mothers, or sisters.

The family status of a woman can be determined from her attire: Unmarried women, for the most part, wear Western clothes whereas their married sisters cover their bodies with black abaiyas and veil their faces, although underneath it all they may be dressed in miniskirts. Their hands, however, are visibly well cared for, their nails are polished, and whatever little shows of their hair is obviously done at the beauty parlor. Yet once married they will never again reveal their faces in public.

There are marriages between Kuwait males and foreign women but none between foreign men and Kuwait women because the ancient matrimonial customs of the Arab world continue to be practiced. Marriage arrangements are made through matchmakers, who extol the qualities and virtues of one party to the other party and then vice-versa, and thus an agreement is reached. Then immediately after the future spouses meet for the first time, their families discuss the conditions. A certain amount of money is agreed upon which the groom must pay for the bride, the extent of which depends on the social standing of the bride. Yet this is not a simple purchase deal.

Tradition requires that the future husband undertake, by means of a monetary guarantee, to maintain his spouse in the style of life to which she is accustomed. If the groom's parents have afforded him a good education, a car, travels, and a luxurious home, he must promise to provide all these amenities in advance of the marriage, before a judge. Then the wedding date is set.

Actually, no wedding ceremony in a mosque or a ballroom is required. It is enough for the couple to spend the first night of their conjugal life in the home of the bride. In some nomad villages the wedding night is witnessed by a sister or the mother of the bride in order to certify the bride's virginity. But this practice is gradually becoming obsolete, "as many other traditions will become soon," I was told.

Contrary to what is generally assumed, in the home married women enjoy all the domestic comforts and privileges, they are treated with solicitude by their husbands and, if they wish it, they may wear Western miniskirts. Polygamy still exists in Kuwait but mostly among the backward segments of the population and "especially among the non-native Arabs who cannot be forbidden to practice it because it is recognized by the law," said Hatim Abdulghani, Kuwait's Press Director.

Kuwait has a crying need for education, which is even more acute than that for accelerated industrialization. "We have 300 schools at different levels of education," Dr. Mohamed Al Zaani said. "But there is a shortage of local teachers, and we find ourselves obliged to import some from Syria, Jordan, Libya and Egypt. At one of our research centres we conduct experiments with the world's most novel educational technology and if the results are satisfactory we adopt it."

From this point of view everything works perfectly. Yet there isn't a single female Kuwait scholarship student abroad, and at the university here no more than thirty girls are registered students. On the other hand, Kuwait's opening to the West is evident in many spheres, including the press, which freely assails Emir Sabah al Salem al Sabah's taste for extravagance, women, luxury cars, and horseraces. Nonetheless Kuwait's women continue to be enslaved by the jealousy of their husbands and fathers. Patterns are being broken in all areas, but least of all in that concerning women.

Georgia Adopts Japan's Factory 'Family' Concept

MACON, Ga. — Backed by an aggressive state and local campaign to lure foreign investment, this central Georgia town of 150,000 has become the unlikely setting for an experiment in transplanting the Japanese style of business management to American soil.

Japan's YKK Industries Inc., the world's largest zipper manufacturer, last year opened a $15 million plant in a new industrial park on the outskirts of Macon. YKK now employs nearly 100 U.S. workers (in addition to a dozen native Japanese) and plans to bring this number to 500 eventually.

In its nearly one year of operations YKK has tried to imbue its American workers with the Japanese corporate values of strong company loyalty and identification, pride in quality work and high productivity that have made that country's industries the envy of many U.S. managers.

To achieve this YKK promises its workers an unusual degree of job security, a daily feeling of participation in how the factory is run and, eventually, part-ownership in the company.

Another traditional Japanese work incentive, the twice-yearly bonus, also has been used to cement worker morale and boost output. The bonus is calculated on the basis of productivity and absenteeism, as well as a percentage of salary.

"Of course, money is important," says Yoshinori Kitano, president of the Macon YKK plant. But the worker also needs to feel that the "company is his family," and that he has "another home here," he adds.

Employees have 'another home' here

The hard-working Kitano in turn feels a special responsibility to the workers: "I protect everyone. I'm working for employees — not myself. I forget my wife, my children. I love 110 people. Even sleeping, I worry about them."

As part of the enthusiastic Kitano's open-management style, he has no office. His desk is close to YKK's main reception area, out in the open, and is freely accessible to the employees.

Constantly wearing the company's uniform, a gray windbreaker with zippers everywhere, Kitano spends about two hours each day on the factory floor. He personally checks each department and works at various machines. Kitano also participates in the mandatory five-minute afternoon factory cleanup.

"Everybody is management, everybody operator, everybody repairman, everybody sweeper," he says, summarizing his management philosophy.

Although it is still early to tell, workers appear to be responding favorably to the system.

"The hours are long, the work is hard, but you seem not to mind that because of better feelings, a better attitude," says Bennie Shelton, 24, who is in charge of two separate departments at YKK's highly automated factory.

"It's a more exciting system," he adds. The Japanese "have something over the Americans in handling people," Shelton believes. If there is a problem, he says, it is that the Japanese "don't understand why the American people aren't as dedicated to their work as they are."

Jim MacDonald, who says he left Coca-Cola Bottling Co. because they bothered him about his long hair, says "the Japanese don't care about things like that as long as you are a hard worker and productive. . . The more work you do the better off you are."

Alex Gregory says working for YKK has required "divorcing myself from the American way of thinking and constantly watching the clock."

Gregory, 26, was the first American hired by Kitano. A graduate of Georgia Tech in textile engineering, Gregory spent three months at YKK's headquarters in Ikuji, Japan, living in a company dormitory and learning the company's operations.

He works between 65 and 70 hours a week as supervisor of the 282 weaving machines that spew out a yard of zipper material each minute. "But rather than a sacrifice, I consider it an investment," he says. "If and when the company makes money, I know I will share in the profits."

Even among Japanese corporations, YKK is unique. Founded in 1934 by Tadao Yoshida, who still is its president, YKK operates under an elaborate enterprise philosophy called "the Cycle of Goodness" that has given Japanese workers 30 per cent ownership of the company.

Supposedly inspired by the writings of Andrew Carnegie, the steel magnate and philanthropist, "the Cycle of Goodness" amounts to an ethical justification for capitalism and also serves as a practical source of internal financing for YKK's continuous and spectacular rate of growth.

Specifically, the phrase refers to a system of forced savings by YKK employees in Japan that gives them ownership shares in the company. Each employee is required to deposit at least 10 per cent of his monthly salary and living allowances with YKK and 50 per cent of his bonuses.

YKK pays dividends on the money — currently 18 per cent, which is in line with other Japanese lending rates — and uses the funds for capital expansion. The shares are not publicly traded, remain at a fixed price and must be returned to the company in the infrequent circumstance of an employee's departure.

"In this manner, business income directly affects the prosperity of society," Yoshida explained last year, "for businesses are not mere seekers after profit, but vital instruments for the improvement of society.

"The cycle enriches our free society and contributes to the happiness of those who work within it. The perpetual working of this cycle produces perpetual prosperity for all."

Although "the Cycle of Goodness' slogan appears throughout the Macon YKK plant, the plan itself has not yet been put into effect there, or at any other YKK plants in the U.S.

It is questionable whether American workers would be willing to go along with such a required expropriation of their salaries, although Kitano said the plan is "under consideration."

For YKK, however, the system has catapulted the company from a $170 investment in 1934 to a $600 million investment in 1974, with 34 factories in 30 countries and enough annual zipper production to reach to the moon and back and corner 25 per cent of the world market for slide fasteners.

The company's success, in fact, has aroused suspicion among competitors in the U.S., Canada and Europe that YKK has dumped zippers on foreign markets at below production costs, to undercut other manufacturers and carve out market shares. The charge has been upheld only in Canada.

The motivation for YKK's construction of the Macon plant and its other international ventures is based in part, at least, on problems the company has had in marketing its products abroad.

A 25 per cent inflation rate in Japan, the rising cost of plant sites there, the relative appreciation of the yen against the dollar, duties on shipments to the U.S. and the constant threat of import quotas on textile items have combined to make it more profitable for Japanese firms to build factories in the U.S. to supply the American market.

Across the way from YKK in the same industrial park, Texprint, Inc. — a joint venture of two Japanese companies and a Hawaiian-based American firm — has constructed a sophisticated $10 million fabric-printing plant for many of these same reasons.

Marshall Cooley, the president of Texprint, who has spent the last 20 years in Honolulu and Japan, says the goal was to "bring Japanese printing expertise here and produce in a dollar-controlled area."

Frank Walthall, a wholesale jobber for Cities Service Oil Co., who has met several of the Japanese employees at YKK at local social functions, says, "The Japanese are hard-working people, they're aggressive and I think they can teach us something."

WHO'S STILL WHO IN PORTUGAL

Another Provisional Government — the fourth since last April's Carnation Revolution — was formed in Lisbon last week. The political balance, to nobody's surprise, has shifted to the Left. But the two main non-Communist parties, the Socialists and Popular Democrats, still have Cabinet roles. This article summarizes the new power line-up in the Portuguese capital.

By COLIN LEGUM

General Francisco da Costa Gomes: President and Commander-in-Chief. Portugal's new father figure is essentially the moderator between the different factions in the army and the cabinet. Now 60 years old, he replaced his close friend, General Antonio de Spinola, when he was ousted from that position in September 1974. Stocky and owlish-looking, Costa Gomes resembles an academic more than a soldier and, indeed, was a distinguished mathematician before deciding to enter the army. As one of Salazar's junior Ministers he was involved in the abortive Beja coup in 1961. He is anti-Communist and openly pro-NATO.

Brigadier-General Vasco Goncalves, Prime Minister: This 53-year-old army engineer is the dominant figure in both the Armed Forces Movement and the cabinet. Lean, scholarly, taciturn and an insomniac, he was one of the intellectuals who helped draft the army's program at the time of the takeover of power last April. He is influenced by Marxism but is not a Communist. Since taking over his new office last September, has tended towards pragmatism rather than doctrinalism.

Brigadier Otelo Saraiva de Carvalho: Director of the Continental Commando Operations (COPCON), whose main role is to "defend the revolution" — in fact to head off any counter-coups within the army or from the Right. After the abortive coup early this month he rashly suggested that the U.S. Ambassador should leave the country — implying that the Central Intelligence Agency was involved in the attempt. Ranks third in military hierarchy. Was a 37-year-old major teaching artillery tactics at the time of the 1974 coup. Widely regarded as a Communist — a charge he dismisses with a chuckle. "Portugal," he says, "is not prepared to accept a Communist Government." Admits to favoring a Socialist government that would wipe out the country's huge inequalities. Regards NATO as being "a sinister organization." Essentially a mediator between the radicals and the more extreme Left in the AFM.

Major Ernesto Melo Artunes, the new foreign minister: Played a leading role in negotiations with the liberation movements in Portugal's African colonies, all of which will be independent by the end of the year. Artunes has made several trips to Algiers and reportedly wants closer ties with the Afro-Arab bloc. Was appointed to the Supreme Revolutionary Council last weekend. A Marxist but not a Communist, he is generally regarded as the "real brain" of the AFM. Also wrote Portugal's New Economic Plan which was attacked by the militant Left as "too moderate." Was previously a minister without portfolio.

Major Vitor Alves this week lost his post as a minister without portfolio. However, he is expected to become Portugal's Permanent Representative to the United Nations or the new roving ambassador. Another radical intellectual, he probably stands to the Left of the Socialists.

Dr. Mario Soares, foreign minister until this week. Heads the Socialist Party which claims to be Marxist; but he is accepted by European social democrats as the leader of their ideas in Portugal. Was jailed 12 times under Salazar before going into exile. He is now one of four ministers without portfolio. He will concentrate his efforts on the campaign for the April 25 election.

Alvaro Cunhal, minister without portfolio. Leader of Portugal's Stalinist Communist Party. Possibly the most popular personality in the country. Dynamic, friendly and highly personable. Sold ties on Lisbon's sidewalks before becoming one of the most brilliant law students of his time. Began clandestine politics in 1936; became Secretary-General of Communist Party in 1942. Jailed in 1949 for 11 years annd badly tortured. Escaped to Prague in 1960.

General Antonio de Spinola, now in exile, was made President by the AFM after the overthrow of Caetano's government last April although he was not himself in the coup. This brilliant, egocentric, monocled soldier contributed directly to the climate which made the coup possible when, after serving as commander of the Portuguese forces in Guinea-Bissau, he published his devastating book Portugal and the Future in 1973, which exposed the myths of Salazarism. Too independent-minded for the radicals in the AFM, he was ousted after quarrelling with them, mainly over economic issues in September, 1974.

Thieu Won't Step Down

KHMER ROUGE CLOSES IN

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Government forces gave up three positions near Phnom Penh under heavy attack today and moved in reinforcements by helicopter to plug holes in the besieged city's defence line.

In Bali, Indonesia, Cambodian Prime Minister Long Boret said there would be a bloodbath if the United States decided to cut off all aid.

"It would be a tragedy for the civilian population," he said.

"The other side continues to have unlimited aid from the Communist side. If aid is brutally cut off we'll be very much affected. We do not lack determination, but we need material aid urgently."

The Cambodian leader accompanied president Lon Nol on a flight to exile earlier this week. Boret said he would return to Phnom Penh in a few days to head the government.

Military sources in Phnom Penh said at least 27 men were reported killed, 58 wounded and 55 missing in the retreat north and northwest of Phnom Penh.

The troops left behind a substantial amount of arms and ammunition at the abandoned posts, one of them six miles north of the city and the others five miles to the northwest.

New defence lines were established closer to the capital, the sources said.

Airborne spotters reported as many as 2,000 rebel reinforcements moving in from the northwest.

The American embassy scheduled a charter flight to take out U.S. personnel under its policy of reducing the number of government employees by 15 per cent.

without a fight of the northern 60 per cent of South Vietnam was "a sound strategic action."

Ford himself, at a news conference at San Diego (see Page 6), said the retreat was "a unilateral decision (by Thieu) to withdraw, (which) created a chaotic situation."

Public distrust in Thieu's leadership continued in Saigon. Riot police fired shots into the air to break up a demonstration Thursday night by 200 Roman Catholics calling for Thieu's ouster.

Senior Communist diplomats told United Press the Viet Cong is willing to stop fighting and begin negotiations immediately, but only if Thieu is replaced.

Thieu announced the resignation of Prime Minister Tran Thien Khiem and the cabinet in a more than hour-long address to his beleaguered nation.

Nguyen Ba Can, chairman of the South Vietnamese National Assembly, has agreed to form the new government, Thieu said.

Can, considered one of the most astute politicians in Saigon, has been chairman of the assembly since the latest congressional elections in 1972. He is regarded by politicians as a rightist and supporter of Thieu, but capable of changing his position when necessary.

On the war front, Communist gunners today fired five 107 M.M. rockets into Can Tho, the Mekong Delta's largest city, 75 miles southwest of Saigon. Military sources said it was the first shelling of the city in more than seven years.

The government retreat from virtually all provinces north of Saigon continued today, and government warships Thursday shelled abandoned fuel tanks at Nha Trang, military sources said.

Navy guns also shelled a nearby bridge on Highway 1 between Nha Trang and Cam Ranh Bay in an attempt to deny use of the road to advancing Communist forces.

U.S. warships and commercial vessels stood by off the South Vietnamese coast to pick up refugees who might be able to put to sea. More than one million persons have fled their homes during the three-week-old Communist offensive.

Government officials said all refugees who escaped would be sent to isolated Phu Quoc Island in the Gulf of Thailand for intensive screening to make sure no Viet Cong were mixed in with the civilians fleeing the Communists.

The island once housed a camp for North Vietnamese prisoners of war.

Few details were available on the Saigon government claim it had broken up an attempted military coup d'etat Thursday night and early today.

A week ago Thieu's security forces arrested dozens of politicians and other civilian opposition forces on charges of plotting a coup.

A spokesman said only that "elements" plotting a military takeover had been arrested and "investigations are continuing." Sources said at least seven persons were arrested.

The Saigon-area military hierarchy, including joint general staff chairman Gen. Cao Van Vien, worked at their desks as usual this morning.

Vien met Thursday with Air Vice Marshal Nguyen Cao Ky, generally considered an anti-Thieu dissident with enough forces loyal to him to attempt a coup.

Ky's whereabouts today could not be immediately learned, but there was no indication he was arrested.

In Washington, U.S. foreign aid officials are studying plans for the possible evacuation of one million South Vietnamese refugees.

The officials said that they are considering evacuating Vietnamese who worked for the U.S. government or had links with American business, fearing they would be persecuted should Vietnam come entirely under Communist control.

The officials would not divulge how such a massive evacuation would be undertaken or to where they would be transported.

In Ottawa, External Affairs Mnister Allan MacEachen Friday announced Canada will provide $6.25 million in immediate aid to all areas of Cambodia and South Vietnam.

The aid will be distributed by international agencies which operate on both sides of the conflict in each country.

MacEachen declined at a press conference to endorse the domino theory which maintains the fall of South Vietnam would lead to further Communist takeovers in Indochina, but he did appeal for an immediate ceasefire.

"Clearly a major military offensive is taking place in South Vietnam. We deplore this, and especially we deplore the suffering which it is causing for the civilian population," he said.

"We appeal to all the parties concerned to end the fighting and to work together toward a negotiated solution."

He said his talks with U.S. Secretary of State Kissinger erarlier this week dealt with Indochina "in a very sombre atmosphere."

He saw no political role for Canada in the conflict but said his country must do all in its power to provide humanitarian aid to stricken civilian populations.

MacEachen also said, "We can and should do something to meet the desires of refugees from whom departure from these countries seems necessary, and the desires of Canadians who wish to take them into their own families in Canada.

"I am thinking especially of orphans and of close relatives of Canadian citizens and residents of Vietnamese origin," he said.

The minister said he understood that Saigon, previously reticent about release of orphans for whom specific Canadian families had not been found, "now is issuing blanket visas for some of the orphans."

Canada was having more difficulty obtaining authorization for adults to leave Vietnam for Canada.

A spokesman said "the problem is that Saigon does not want to allow adult males of military age to leave the country, and I understand military age is anywhere between age 16 and 43."

FORD REASSURES

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (WP) — President Ford Thursday warned American adversaries that the United States will not back down on its world commitments because of "the great tragedy" in South Vietnam.

"We will stand by our allies and I specifically warn any adversaries they should not, under any circumstances, feel that the tragedy of Vietnam is an indication that the American people have lost their will or their desire to stand up for freedom any place in the world," Ford told a nationally televised news conference.

The president used even stronger language in public and private speeches here. He indicated that the U.S. would use force if necessary to protect the lives of Americans now in South Vietnam, and he also implied that Congress will be held accountable by the American people if South Vietnam fails to survive or if the U.S. defense budget is reduced.

In a private breakfast meeting with California editors and publishers, Ford made a remark he described as "off the record" in which he said:

"President Thieu made a unilateral decision to withdraw from Military Areas 1, 2 and 3. And I am told by experts that a withdrawal is the most difficult military manoeuvre to undertake. The commanders were unprepared and did not take into consideration the flood of hundreds of thousands of refugees that clogged the highways."

White House officials indicated that Ford is reluctant to be publicly critical of the Thieu government or the South Vietnamese military performance because of the danger that that would further contribute to the deterioration of South Vietnamese morale and heighten the danger to Americans still in the country.

Babylift Starts With Disaster As Orphans' Airliner Crashes

The aircraft was designed specifically to haul tanks, helicopters and other large military equipment. Passenger seats were not routinely placed in the cargo compartment although about 80 regular airline seats are included in a second deck of the plane.

The $56 million plane is manufactured by Lockheed and is 248 feet long, has 223-foot wingspan and stands as high as a six-story building.

The air force began flying the plane in June, 1970, but it has been plagued by wing cracks and still flies under weight restrictions.

The Galaxy was grounded for a time in 1971 after one of the four engines tore loose as one of the planes was preparing to take off from Altus air force base in Oklahoma.

In a related development, nations around the world responded today to pleas to help refugees in South Vietnam.

The Swedish government announced in Stockholm it will give $6 million in wheat, milk and medicines to South Vietnam, half of which will go directly to the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government.

The Viet Cong in Geneva asked the International Red Cross and the United Sations International Childrens Emergency Fund Thursday for urgent aid for civilians in territory newly under its control in South Vietnam.

The Red Cross already has parachuted bread and rice to isolated groups of refugees and chartered boats to ferry medicine to other large number of displaced persons.

In Hong Kong, Lufthansa airlines began airlifting 18 tons of relief goods and medicine into South Vietnam on behalf of the West German government, a company spokesman said today.

He said the DC-10 jetliner will bring evacuees out of Saigon on its return flight, and another Boeing 707 freighter is scheduled to leave for Saigon next Sunday; a third flight is planned for next Tuesday.

In Canberra, the Australian government sped a Qantas Boeing 747 jet to Bangkok to pick up about 500 Vietnamese children destined for adoption by Australian parents.

At least two flights from Canada to South Vietnam are planned immediately with each to bring back 250 infants and young children. The first was expected to leave for Saigon today.

More flights may be arranged if more Canadians express interest in adopting children from the war-torn Southeast Asia country.

★ Few Tears Left

"I think the kids were quiet because they were getting dopey from an absence of oxygen.

"I don't know how long we were in the air. We were losing altitude. But we had plenty of time. We had to discuss what we were going to do.

"We talked about what doors we were going out of when we impacted. We didn't stand by the doors. We were feeding oxygen to the kids."

"The kids were wonderful," she added, asking that her name not be used.

"My folks didn't know I was on this flight," she said.

"The children were beautiful. They were noisy when we took off. They were scared, and they didn't like the straps holding them down.

"They were sitting two to a seat, six seats across, 12 to a row.

At the crash site Vietnamese civilians looked on inscrutably. Few of them took part in rescue efforts. One man found several blankets in the debris which he carried away.

There were few tears when the bodies of the small victims were lifted out.

Perhaps there are few tears left for orphans in a nation whose 30 years of war has produced too many of them.

THE REIGNING ERROR

Inflation Mechanism

I find in conversation that this view of inflation is continuously interrupted by "yes, but . . ." Although it is traditional, it is in some way unfamiliar, and there is a natural tendency to doubt and question it. There is also a difficulty in explaining the mechanism, as I believe it to be, in one sustained piece of argument and analysis. In some ways it is as difficult as it would be to write an account of how a clock works which would provide someone who was not a clockmaker with a useful understanding of that machinery.

There is also the need to make room for objections, at least for the natural objections which anyone might be expected to take on hearing this account for the first time, I have therefore cast the argument as though it had to be presented to court. It is no bad thing to imagine oneself having to argue a case before a tough-minded judge. In order to stimulate my imagination I chose Jeffreys, who conducted the bloody assize after Monmouth's rebellion, as the judge to preside over the court. He was in fact a much worse man than I have portrayed him.

"Do you promise to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, so help you God?"

"I do."

JEFFREYS. Prisoner at the bar, you come here charged with a most heinous and abominable offence, that is, pretending by various spells and necromancies to foretell the future, contrary to the interest and credit of Her Majesty's liege subjects. You are further charged with posing as an economist. How plead you guilty or not guilty?

PRISONER. Not guilty, m'lud.

JEFFREYS (aside). I never saw a more villainous rogue in all my life. I'll swear if he is an economist, I'll get it out of him. Prisoner, you write about this word "inflation." Pray tell the court, what do you mean by this word "inflation?"

PRISONER. By inflation I mean bad money, that is money which does not hold its value.

JEFFREYS. If money does not hold its value, what happens then?

PRISONER. Prices rise.

JEFFREYS. Then inflation is simply rising prices.

PRISONER. No, m'lud. Prices can rise for reasons which have nothing to do with inflation. A sudden rise in demand, an unexpected shortage of supply will cause prices to rise. The price of wheat rises after a bad harvest, that is the price mechanism doing its job. If the price of wheat rises after a good harvest, that is probably inflation.

Balancing Tendency

JEFFREYS. Then how do you tell which are your normal healthy price increases and which your inflation?

PRISONER. Over time, ordinary price increases are balanced by price reductions. A bad harvest pushes prices up, a good one causes them to fall. Greater demand for copper pushes up the copper price, a new mine is opened and they fall. That is the normal operation of the system. With inflation there is a general tendency for prices to rise, and correspondingly for money to purchase less.

JEFFREYS. Is not this inflation some new and devilish invention of the economists, for which they thoroughly deserve to be whipped at the cart's tail through the City of London? There was no inflation in my father's day.

PRISONER. By no means, m'lud. Inflation is as old as money. It often takes people by surprise, but it is as frequently recurring as any of the plagues which affect mankind.

JEFFREYS. Tell me of these inflations. I did not read of them in my school books.

PRISONER. There were famous inflations in classical times: Alexander the Great was troubled by inflation, or at least his people were; the Roman Empire was given to inflations, and many say was finally destroyed by them.

JEFFREYS. I see you make out a respectable classical ancestry for this modern bastardy. What then caused the inflations?

PRISONER. The same thing as causes all inflations, too much money.

JEFFREYS. Explain yourself. I do not see how one can have too much money.

PRISONER. Money is only good for buying things. If there is an increase in the supply of money, but no increase in the supply of things, then money will buy less.

JEFFREYS. How came this to happen with Alexander?

PRISONER. When he invaded Asia he conquered the capitals of powerful princes, and with them the gold hoards they had accumulated. That gold increased his money supply with no corresponding increase in productive capacity. There was an increase in money not balanced by an increase in things.

JEFFREYS. And the Caesars, did they also conquer great stores of gold?

PRISONER. The Caesars had soldiers to pay and were short of money with which to pay them so they clipped the coinage and reduced its quality to make the gold and silver go further.

JEFFREYS. Then the great Caesars defrauded their soldiers, like a common innkeeper passing a bad shilling.

PRISONER. Indeed M'lud, they did so, and all inflations, except for those which have begun in an increase in the gold supply, have fraud at the heart of them.

Too Much Gold

JEFFREYS. You speak of the gold inflations: which are those?

PRISONER. Alexander's is the first. The Spanish discovery of the gold in the New World is the second. The opening of the South African gold field is the third. In each case the increase was in good money, in gold of fine quality, but the rapid increase in the money supply in each case caused inflation, caused higher prices.

JEFFREYS. You say too much gold can do it, and adulterating the coinage can do it. I have hanged many a counterfeiter; perhaps it would have been as well to hang the Caesars. I do not see how inflation can result both from making the currency better and from making it worse.

PRISONER. M'lud, it is a question of quantity. If the effect is to increase the supply of money, it does not matter initially if that increase is in gold or in light weight. The effect is that the supply of money increases faster than the supply of goods.

JEFFREYS. Do all inflations come from too much gold or from debasing the coinage?

PRISONER. No, m'lud. The inflations of the Eighteenth Century came mostly from the issue of paper money. France had two such inflations, Law's inflation of 1720, and the assignat inflation of the 1790s.

JEFFREYS. We have, then, inflations from too much gold, from the state reducing the value of its own money, and from paper money. Is that all?

PRISONER. No, m'lud, we have had in the Twentieth Century inflations which were the result of an increase in the money supply through credit.

JEFFREYS. (taking up his quill pen; writes: "Twentieth Century: Credit") This is too hard for me: I tell you, since I was appointed the vacation Judge in Purgatory, your Twentieth Century has been the most bloody and confusing age I have seen. Who creates this credit?

PRISONER. Governments do. They spend more than they raise in taxation, and they make up the difference by creating more money. This money then circulates through the banking system. It is not new gold, or clipped coin, or paper notes, but it is the creation of money nonetheless.

The Regency Period Returns As Jane Austen Takes Stage

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Images of a time more flowery, more formal and certainly more sedate than even our most senior citizens could recall are being conjured in the Phoenix Theatre this week.

The period is the Regency in Britain — a tiny segment of those 30 years bridging the 17th and 18th centuries when George IV as Prince of Wales held the reins for his mad father.

The place is the south of England and the protagonist is Jane Austen — Our Own Particular Jane.

The dramatized reading of Joan Mason Hurley's play about her famous ancestor will be repeated tonight and Saturday at 8. It is being presented by University of Victoria English and theatre departments in conjunction with a three-day symposium at UVic honoring the Austen bicentennary.

Mrs. Hurley's skill as playwright is evident in her choice of fragments that evolve Jane's personality and outlook, offering a brief summary of her career and a good sampling of her creative style.

All of which she has linked with passages of narration that provide stylistically smooth transitions.

Directed by Maurice Harty, the stage, with its period furnishings and fluid, gentle lighting, establishes a perfect mood. Harty has kept the piece moving, never allowing one's eye to tire but abstaining from fuss and avoiding self-conscious "direction."

An excellent cast performs the play, leading us to forget that they are carrying scripts, so well do they enter into the characterizations.

Each of the four — Trish Grainge, Reg Terry, Patricia Wainman-Wood and Anthony Jenkins — presents us with two or more cameo portraits.

Vancouver actress Trish Grainge is mostly Jane, investing the author with a delicate charm and animation. She is also Elizabeth Bennet, the spirited heroine of Pride and Prejudice, and does such justice to it that one wishes for much more of this.

Ms Wainman-Wood's several characters and accents are also most impressively drawn.

School Cleanup Studied

Greater Victoria School District administrators today are trying to work out a schedule for parent volunteers to clean the schools when longer school hours begin Tuesday.

The volunteer cleaners will have to work either in the evening, in the later afternoon when classes are over, or during the lunch break, school board spokesman Bill Stavdal said.

Evening cleaning would have the advantage of drawing out more fathers to clean, Stavdal said, but also poses problems of finding responsible people to unlock the schools.

The volunteers must work when classes aren't in session because many teachers object to working beside volunteer strikebreakers.

The school board voted last week to return senior secondary schools to a five-hour day on Tuesday, junior secondaries to a four-hour day, and elementary schools to a five-hour day if they can be kept clean enough.

On Monday all schools will be on the schedule they've followed since early March three hours of classes in the morning for most schools.

The reduced hours, and the volunteer cleanup, are the result of the strike Feb. 24 of school district custodians and maintenance workers, Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Stavdal said a team of trustees, administration, staff and parents did a two-day blitz cleanup of the district's dirtiest schools on Easter weekend.

Stock Market Recovery Running Out of Steam

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The great market recovery appears to be running out of steam, according to statistics released today by major Canadian stock exchanges.

Trading in Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver in March was below the February level, which in turn was lower than that for January.

The market recovery, which began in the first week of January, reached a peak early in February. At first it merely levelled out but now appears to be edging downwards.

The Toronto industrial index was 180.29 at the end of March, down from a February high of 187.51. It had started the year at about 157. Ther March 31 index put the market almost exactly where it was on Jan. 31, well below the peak of early February.

Total dollar value of all shares sold on the Toronto exchange in March was $269.4 million, down from $350.5 million in February, which was down from $459.1 million in january.

Vancouver and Montreal followed identical patterns. Dollar value of shares traded in Vancouver during March was $21.3 million, down from January's $25.5 million. Montreal trading value in March was $135 million, down from January's $146.4 million.

Trading volumes in March were also lower than in the January boom. Toronto volume slumped to 42.9 million shares from 54.7 million while Vancouver's trading totalled 35.6 million, down from 41.3 million. Montreal volume was marginally lower at 13.6 million, down from 13.7 million.

Because of the weak March performance, the total Canadian trading in the first quarter was below the level of the first quarter of 1974.

Total trading during the three months in Canada was worth $1.7 billion, down from $2.5 billion during the first three months of 1974. Volume totalled 313 million shares, down from 508 million.

In Toronto, International Nickel and Imperial Oil continued to be brisk sellers during the market downturn. The price for both stocks has been fairly stable during the past week.

Other heavy traders include Bell Canada, Moore Corporation, Kaiser Resources and Alcan.

Four western mining companies hit new highs at month's end: Brenda, Gibraltar, Dynasty and Pine Point. However, these 1975 highs were mainly a recovery from very low levels in late 1974.

Other issues hitting highs for the year included Carlings, Ford, Finning and Intermetco.

Mines and oils were generally weaker in March than earlier in the year, although there was some upward movement in mine prices at month's end as prices for some metals were up.

A turnaround in oil shares depends mainly on government actions. A federal-provincial conference on petroleum prices will be held in Ottawa this month.

GLOOM HITS ABITIBI

TORONTO (CP) — Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. said Thursday that its view for the remainder of 1975 "is not nearly as optimistic as it was two months ago" when the company's annual report was written.

In a statement accompanying the annual report released Thursday, Abitibi said there is a major recession under way in the United States and Canada.

Since its report was written, "there has been a steady erosion in the demand for all products with the exception of newsprint and in this area publishers' stocks are at their highest level in history preparing for major work stoppages in the Canadian industry."

Abitibi previously reported record sales and income for 1974. Net earnings increased to $45.88 million from $29.88 million in 1973. Sales were $551.89 million, up from $403.53 million.

Chairman T. J. Bell said in the report that Abitibi's acquisition last November of controlling interest in Price Co. was "a long cherished dream." Abitibi paid $125.5 million for the five million Price shares. Together they are the world's largest newsprint producer.

The United States Justice Department has asked Abitibi for information on its operations and details of the acquisition, under the Clayton Act which prohibits acquisitions in the U.S. where the effect may be to substantially lessen competition or create a monopoly.

"If the United States Department of Justice contends that this acquisition is in violation of the Clayton Act, for a number of reasons including principles of international law respecting the sovereignty of independent nations, it is doubtful that an order against the acquisition would be entered United States Court," Bell said.

"In addition, Abitibi's Canadian counsel have advised that such an order would not be enforced by the Canadian courts."

Company Profits Decline

OTTAWA (CP) — Corporate after-tax profits declined by $68 million during the final quarter of 1974 from a year earlier, despite a $7.4 billion rise in sales, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

According to a survey of industrial companies by the government agency, profit for the final three months of last year were $2.26 billion, about three per cent lower than during the comparable period a year earlier.

Sales increased 17 per cent to $50 billion in the 1974 quarter.

Record $2.19B By UIC

OTTAWA (CP) — Total unemployment insurance benefits paid out in 1974 hit a record $2.19 billion, Statistics Canada reports in its annual review of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

In 1973, total benefits stood at $2.004 billion, about six per cent lower.

The bureau's report shows that the average number of claimants at the end of each month was 828,000, slightly lower than in 1973.

In 1974, the total number of employees covered under the act was 867,000, up four per cent from 1973.

Although fewer weeks of benefit were paid out in 1974 than in the previous year, this was offset by higher average weekly benefits which brought the total paid out above the 1973 level.

Average weekly benefit in 1974 was $74.89, up from $68.45 in 1973, while in 1973 there were 29.54 million weeks of benefits paid out compared with 28.46 million last year.

The maximum weekly benefit payable in 1974 was $113, up from $107 in 1973.

Sales were $10,536,000 in 1974, down from $18,713,000 the previous year. Net returns from lumber fell 20 per cent last year, while uncontrollable costs increased 24 per cent over 1973.

Fuller Brush

Consolidated Foods Corp. has announced an intention to sell Fuller Brush Co. and its group of four furniture companies. John H. Bryan, president, said the planned sales of these divisions is part of the corporation's continuing re-investment program.

Standard Industries

Standard Industries Ltd. has purchased Haldimand Quarries and Construction Ltd., operators of a large limestone quarry at Hagersville, Ont. The investment, in the company takeover and purchase of new equipment, is about $2.25 million.

Reed Paper

Reed Paper Ltd. of Toronto has purchased, through a United States subsidiary, certain assets of the wall-covering division of Dwoskin, Inc., for about $9 million. Dwoskin is a U.S. distributor of wall coverings.

Montreal Trust

Record high short-term interest rates and increased operating costs were blamed for Montreal Trust Co.'s substantial decrease in profits in 1974 compared with those of 1973.

The company's 1974 net income dropped to $2,727,000 or $1.06 a share from $4,399,000 or $1.71 a share in 1973.

The company's annual report showed revenue rose by almost $2 million to $39,314,000 and assets increased by almost $69 million to $696,286,000. Expenses climbed to $35,084,000 from $29,832,000 in 1973.

Addressing shareholders at the annual meeting, president Paul Britton Paine said Montreal Trust was obliged by competition in 1974 to offer 10¾-per-cent interest rates on deposits.

Such a rate caused profit margins to disappear entirely for a brief time, he said.

Auto Turmoil: Long Term

DETROIT (NYT) — The auto industry, already shaken by the energy crisis, has been plunged into an economic crisis that has left many of its executives feeling helpless and uncertain.

There is still confidence that the U.S. is so dependent on the automobile that nothing short of a catastrophic shortage of oil could wrest from the industry its dominance over the nation's transportation system.

But there is also wide agreement that the current turmoil will have lasting effects, that it is more than a temporary downturn.

The feeling is that the pressures of energy, inflation and further government intervention will determine much of the industry's future, and thus that the days are over when designers could indulge their fantasies, when engineers could ignore efficiency, and when top executives could smugly predict an ever-expanding auto market.

The industry's present cutbacks, not only in the size of its cars but in the size of the companies, are long lasting. Some top executives and analysts predict that the present crunch will mean smaller car markets for the long-term future.

There are workers who have not been recalled since their layoffs last spring during the energy crisis. Some have already begun migrating to other areas of the country in search of jobs. All four of the auto makers have made long-term cuts in their engineering and styling departments.

Car buyers can look forward to smaller, lighter, more economical cars but no reductions in prices — in effect, paying more for less car.

The industry's massive effort to slim down the cars will bring the present standard models back to about their size and weight in the 1950's. They will, however, look quite different because a major consideration of design will be reducing air drag to improve fuel economy.

The new small Cadillac that G. M. introduced April 1, for example, is 27 inches shorter and one foot narrower than present Cadillacs. It weighs about 1,000 pounds less than the present 5,100-pound Cadillac. It is powered by a 350-cubic-inch engine with a highly advanced fuel injection system instead of the present 500 cubic-inch engine. And it is expected to deliver about 25 per cent higher fuel economy.

Despite considerable savings in materials, however, the car will be priced near the top of the Cadillac line, from $11,000 to $12,000.

There is wide agreement here that shortages of energy and materials — not only of what goes into the cars but of the natural gas, for example, to run the plants that produce the cars — will continue. According to current predictions, severe shortages of natural gas could occur by next fall, causing plants to cut back production.

Many of the basic materials such as steel, glass and rubber are in uncertain supply. Most top executives concede that the industry could not have built many more cars in 1974 than it did because of shortages of steel.

While the predicament that the industry finds itself in is partly due to forces beyond its control, some of its traditional strategies are also to blame, executives agree.

The energy crisis hit the industry at the worst possible time. Its products had reached the lowest levels in fuel economy in decades, both because of Government pollution and safety standards and the industry's push for larger and more powerful cars filled with options.

The industry reversed this process during the energy crisis, beginning a massive conversion of its plants to produce small cars and speeding up the development of new smaller cars for the future.

At the same time, however, the automakers loaded up the small cars with options to make them more profitable. Also, during 1974 they raised prices on small cars from 15 to 20 per cent while prices on bigger cars went up only 10 to 15 per cent.

The combination of high inflation rates and the beginning of an economic downturn had a devastating effect on the sales of new 1975 models, introduced last fall.

GM Truck Sales Up

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP)—General Motors of Canada Ltd. reported Thursday sales of 42,300 passenger cars and trucks in March, 12.8 per cent higher than for the same month last year.

J. D. Duffy, vice-president and general sales manager, said passenger car sales of 30,650 units were 3,009 or 10.9 per cent ahead of last year's volume of 27,641 units.

Truck deliveries of 11,650 vehicles exceeded the 9,843 level of March, 1974, by 18.4 per cent and almost matched the record month total of 11,911 set in 1973.

Despite a slow start in January, sales of 102,936 GM cars and trucks for the first three months of 1975 represent the second best quarter, surpassed only by the record 104,774 units of 1974.

Volvo Sales Double

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Volvo of America Corp. reported Thursday that March sales were almost double those for the same month last year, increasing 98 per cent to 6,729 cars from 3,396 in March, 1974.

Volvo also said it has raised prices on its 1975 passenger cars, effective April 1. The increases range between $330 and $455, and the company blamed them on the decline in value of the U.S. dollar relative to the Swedish krona.

Meanwhile, Volkswagen of America also reported better March sales than last year — up 2.4 per cent to 32,190 units from 31,420 in March, 1974.

But Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A. said its sales declined to 21,838 units last month from 24,324 a year ago — a drop of 10 per cent.

AMC Reports Dip

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP)—American Motors Canada Ltd. said Thursday that car sales in March were 2,648, down 15.1 per cent from the 3,122 sold in March last year.

For the model year to date, sales totalled 13,195, off 16.7 per cent from the 15,835 for the same period of 1974.

March Jeep sales totalled 365 units, highest March level in company history, up from 344 in the same month of 1974.

Jeep sales for the model year to date increased 10.5 per cent to 1,980 from the 1,791 sold in the comparable period last year, the company said.

Hunsperger Begins 2-Month Term

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Garrett Hunsperger, former all-star defensive lineman with British Columbia Lions Thursday began serving a two-month term in Prince George Regional Correctional Centre.

The sentence was handed out earlier Thursday by Judge Stewart McMorran who last month found Hunsperger guilty of two counts of assault causing bodily harm.

Hunsperger had earlier been ordered by the B.C. Supreme Court to pay $8,000 aggravated damages in a civil action arising from the same incident. He was then released by the Lions to the Toronto Argonauts for the waiver price of $350.

The six-foot-three, 255-pound defensive tackle was found guilty of the charges March 26 but Judge McMorran postponed formal sentencing at the request of defence counsel Tony Pantages.

The judge passed sentence Thursday despite a request by Bruce Preston, standing in for Pantages, that court be adjourned until today to allow an appeal to be launched.

Hunsperger had pleaded not guilty to assaulting Robert Porter, a maitre'd and Donald Antosko, a bellboy, at the Inn of the North here last April 23.

In finding him guilty of the charges, Judge McMorran said Hunsperger was guilty of "absolutely outrageous conduct" and said there was "no justification for your display of violence which could not be condoned in any way."

The judge said Hunsperger seemed to "have gone almost beserk" by attacking people smaller than himself. He said he would have imposed a longer sentence if Hunsperger had not been fined so heavily in the civil action.

VANCOUVER (CP)—A spokesman for the University of British Columbia said Thursday that final examinations could be affected by contract negotiations with Local 116 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees. Contingency arrangements, such as deferred examinations, are being made in case the 1,400 non-academic employees withdrawn services, he added.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two men charged with possession of heroin and cocaine for the purpose of trafficking were remanded in custody to Saturday when they appeared in provincial court Thursday. Shannon Vargo, 23, and Phillip Robinson, 27, were arrested Wednesday. The RCMP drug squad seized seven ounces of heroin and three ounces of cocaine worth $75,000 on the street.

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Forest Service announced Thursday a log salvage closure in the Sechelt area. A spokesman said 300 to 400 logs broke loose in the aea, which runs from Sergeant's Bay to Mission Point and includes Trail Island.

★ ★ ★

VANCOUVER (CP) — Faculty and staff representatives have been elected for the first time to serve on the Simon Fraser University board of governors, it was announced Thursday. Elected for three-year terms which start June 1 were Dorothy Matsen, accounts payable supervisor, Dr. John Ellis, education faculty, and Dr. Lionel Funt, chemistry department. Faculty members also elected 20 representatives to the university senate.

GUNFIGHT PAIR REMANDED WEEK

COQUITLAM (CP) — Two men charged in connection with attempted bank holdup and a running gunfight with police were remanded Thursday in custody to next Wednesday.

Leonard Methot, 23, of St. Michel, Que., and Real Cardinal, 32, of Vancouver are charged jointly with 13 counts including eight of attempted murder.

Two RCMP officers were wounded during a chase following the attempted holdup of a Bank of Montreal branch Monday. No money was taken. Two men were captured while two others in a car escaped.

Meanwhile, the manhunt for two men sought in connection with the holdup shifted Thursday to Manitoba after a car believed to have been stolen by the pair was found abandoned in Portage la Prairie, 60 miles west of Winnipeg.

A taxi driver said later he picked up two men Wednesday afternoon who answered the description of the suspects at a Portage la Prairie motel and drove them to Winnipeg.

CARVER Gunther Geyer, of Mission, plans to turn this giant piece of jade into a carving of a rearing stallion. First, he plans to rough out the shape with an electric jackhammer to skim off the waste, and then comes the time-consuming part of the estimated six-month job of sanding and grinding for final shape and polish.

CUPE Talks Resume

VANCOUVER (CP) — The negotiating committee of the Canadian Union of Public Employees representing lower mainland civic workers said Thursday negotiations will resume Sunday.

Aubrey Burton, CUPE spokesman, said the committee, after two days of closed sessions, told mediator Gus Leonidas was ready to meet with the civic negotiators.

The 5,000 workers in Delta, Richmond, New Westminster, Vancouver and North Vancouver city and district, earn base rates which range from $4.52 to $6.12½ an hour.

In Surrey, where municipal workers have been on strike for four weeks, Mayor Bill Vander Zalm said negotiations will resume today.

"Hopefully, they'll be the most fruitful to date," Vander Zalm said.

"We're ready to lay on the line a position that should be acceptable to all concerned. I will admit it'll require a lot of give on the part of the union."

Current wages in Surrey include $4.48 an hour for a laborer and $447 a month for clerical staff.

Ft. Ware Relief Airlift

FORT WARE (CP) — The Indian affairs department in Prince George will send a plane-load of groceries to this isolated village 250 miles northwest of Prince George today in answer to a plea by the operator of the village's only store, Jim Van Somer.

Van Somer said in a letter to government agencies and the Prince George Citizen Wednesday that about 200 Indians in this remote village face starvation unless food supplies are replenished.

District administrator Vern Rhymer said today the department will pay transportation costs to send 2,500 pounds of food this week and added he will visit the village next week to further assess the situation.

Rhymer said the department was not advised of the seriousness of the food shortage until Van Somer issued his letter Wednesday, saying a poor trapping season and higher food and freight costs had increased the debts he was carrying for residents' food bills and he could no longer get credit for new shipments of food.

Van Somer said about 90 per cent of the village's income is from social welfare payments, which are insufficient to provide adequate nutrition. He said his food stocks were dwindling and that by the end of the week he would have only flour and sugar.

In about two weeks, he added the spring that would end air traffic to the isolated settlement and boats would be unable to reach Fort Ware for about two months.

Rhymer said he has talked to Van Somer by radiophone and added that band chief Emil McCook has confirmed the seriousness of the food shortage.

Family Firm Claim Rejected

OTTAWA (CP) — The tax review board has turned down an attempt by a husband and wife to avoid personal income tax by setting up a consulting company.

The decision by Judge K. A. Flanigan said there was not sufficient difference between the activities of the company and the work of the husband, Desmond Connor.

Connor had appealed to the tax review board from a revenue department ruling that the earnings of the company should be attributed to him.

Connor, who's academic background is in agriculture and sociology, established his consulting firm in Ottawa in 1968.

"As I explained at the hearing," Judge Flanigan said, "I did not completely comprehend all the niceties of the terms used by Mr. Connor and his wife and by witnesses . . . but I feel that my knowledge is sufficient to permit me to say that Connor's work is in the field of 'people development,' social behavior and the advising of groups in various localities as to how they might band together to present a common front in an effort to prevent environmental damage . . ." Judge Flanigan said.

Between December, 1968, and November, 1973, the company, D. M. Connor Development Services Ltd., had annual gross earnings of between $46,000 and $107,000.

Testimony at the hearing showed that there was a verbal contract between the company and the Connors to pay him $1,500 a month during the period covered by the appeal — 1969-1971 — and to pay his wife, Etta, $250 a month.

Mrs. and Mrs. Connor would each pay personal income tax on their earnings. Earnings of the company, after expenses had been deducted, would be taxed at the more favorable small-business rate.

Mrs. Connor, now a psychologist, was the first witness at the hearing.

"She gave her evidence in the box, and I must say I was most impressed with the manner in which she gave it," Judge Flanigan said.

"However, when one reads the career resume in detail from 1956— when she was a high school teacher in Ontario and Nova Scotia — until the year 1974, one does not . . . find substance or depth to her alleged abilities or to the contribution to this company that this witness is alleged to make."

A contract concerning work for a government agency was introduced.

"As one reads the entire contract, it is clear and unequivocal that what the minister was hiring . . . was the expertise, knowledge and proven ability of Mr. Connor alone," Judge Flanigan said.

Another contract, with the town of North Pickering, Ont., was introduced and again "there is nothing to indicate that anyone other than Dr. Desmond Connor was expected to do the work," Judge Flanigan said.

"In my view there is no evidence to support the argument or assertion that his wife was an integral part of the project team . . ."

Judge Flanigan said he could find no sound business reason for incorporation.

TIME HOLLERS 'HELP'

OTTAWA (CP) — Time magazine is appealing to its Canadian readers to help save the domestic edition of the publication.

In a 1,200-word statement in this week's Time Canada edition, company president Stephen S. LaRue of Toronto calls on readers to launch a letter-writing campaign over proposed federal legislation to abolish tax deductions for advertisers in Time and Reader's Digest.

"The people least consulted in this entire controversy have been those likely to be among the most affected—the readers of Time Canada," the statement says.

It urges the magazine's 550,000 domestic buyers to make known their views on the proposed legislation in letters to Prime Minister Trudeau, Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner and their MPs.

The government is expected to introduce tax legislation shortly after the Commons returns from its Easter recess next week to eliminate concessions which permit advertisers in Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest to claim full tax deductions for advertising costs.

Executives of both Time and Reader's Digest have said the move, to take effect next Jan. 1, will undermine their ability to publish Canadian editions.

Reader's Digest president Paul Zimmerman of Montreal urged the monthly magazine's 1,300,000 domestic subscribers in February to write letters to their MPs on the issue.

MPs said they were deluged with mail—but an official in Faulkner's office said the government is not taking the letter writing very seriously.

He said Faulkner received about 1,000 letters, more than two-thirds in favor of the proposed legislation, before the Reader's Digest campaign began. Since then another 5,000 letters have come in to Faulkner's office—about 90 per cent against the government action.

In the Time message, LaRue repeated the company's offer to sell 75 per cent of its ownership to Canadians and to increase Canadian content of the magazine in the hopes of retaining the tax deductions for advertisers.

But he reaffirmed that the company "abhors" the idea of any government control over the magazine's content.

Faulkner has said the government is reviewing existing tax provisions stating that a publication can be considered Canadian if, among other things, it is between 60 and 80 per cent different in content from foreign publications.

THIEF CHASER WORSE OFF

TORONTO (UPI)—A man who fired a shotgun at four escaping robbers has been jailed for three years — longer than the sentence handed any of the bandits.

The judge warned the public against taking the law into their own hands.

Antonio Martino, 26, was convicted of attempted murder for running into the street and shooting at the bandits' getaway car after he and a friend had been robbed in an apartment. The driver was wounded in the head and the car crashed into a parked auto.

Two of the bandits were jailed for two years each and another received one year.

VIOLENCE-FREE PACTS FORESEEN

CONNAGHAN

Canadian Press

The president of British Columbia's Construction Labor Relations Association said Thursday that B.C. will likely be one of the few Canadian provinces to settle trade union contracts this year without violence.

C. J. (Chuck) Connaghan said about 1.2 million workers, about 71 per cent of Canadian Trade union members, will be negotiating new contracts and Alberta and Ontario in particular can expect some difficulties.

Connaghan commented during taping of BCTV's Capital Comment to be aired Sunday. The CLRA represents some 850 firms in B.C.

"I think we can expect some real trouble particularly in view of the settlements that we're now seeing being discussed at the bargaining table," he said.

Statistics on settlements currently under negotiation indicate that "if we're not very careful, we're going to do lasting damage to our economy," Connaghan said.

"We're going to see more violence," he said, adding that reaction to some contract demands will be greater resistance by management.

"I can foresee emotions getting out of hand and I can see a situation developing where there's going to be trouble," Connaghan said.

He said B.C., however, will likely be violence-free.

B.C. traditionally has reached settlements with little or no violence and "I think that when the chips are down, good common sense will prevail."

There are 453 agreements to expire in B.C. this year involving some 250,000 workers, he said.

Current Canadian Union of Public Employee disputes throughout the province are "really a holdover from 1974," he said, adding B.C. hasn't yet started into 1975 negotiations.

DOCKERS VOW LENGTHY STRIKE

MONTREAL (CP) — A union official said Thursday a strike by 2,200 longshoremen could tie up three St. Lawrence River ports indefinitely if employers do not compromise on their negotiating position.

"If nobody moves it will be a long strike," said Fernand shoremen's Association, at odds with the Maritime Employ- Boudreault, secretary-treasurer of the International Longshoremen's Association.

"I hope the employers make a move, or we'll stay out as long as necessary," he said of the striking workers at Montreal, Trois-Rivieres and Quebec City.

The strike began Monday over job security proposals which the union called "a step back into slavery."

Boudreault said no new meetings or reassessments of the union position were imminent and the membership "supports us fully."

Government-appointed mediator Charles Poirier Wednesday adjourned indefinitely talks to end the deadlock.

Arnold Masters, the employers's group president, has said the diversion of cargo caused by the strike could be economically disastrous for the ports.

A spokesman for the association was not available for comment Thursday.

The union last week rejected a conciliation report by Chief Judge Alan B. Gold of Quebec provincial court. The employers urged "unqualified acceptance" of the report.

The Gold report called for 1,600 work hours in 40 weeks for Montreal longshoremen, 1,400 hours in 35 weeks for those in Quebec City and 1,200 hours in 30 weeks for Trois-Rivieres workers.

FIR Criticizes Wages in Gov't

VANCOUVER (CP) — A letter to Labor Minister Bill King from a forest industry executive says recent labor settlements — particularly in the public sector — are placing a tremendous strain on negotiations in British Columbia's primary industry.

Contents of the letter sent by Donald Lanskail, president of Forest Industrial Relations and the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations B,u r e a u were released Thursday although the original letter was sent in early March.

Lanskail's letter informed King that wage settlelments in B.C. Hydro, B.C. hospitals, B.C. Telephone and the provincial government service are putting "enormous pressure on our industry, which does not have the convenient 'pass it on' capabilities because it must compete in world markets."

The letter warned the labor minister that the stability of the entire B.C. forest industry is seriously threatened as it prepares for industry-wide bargaining this year.

"Leaders in the International Woodworkers of America and the pulp unions area are also subjected to enormous pressure," said Lanskail in the letter. "Their membership who pay municipal taxes and power and gas bills, argue with some justification that employees in service industry, whether it be public or private, should not be getting more than the people who in a very real sense are the backbone of the economy and have to pay the wages of those service employees."

Lanskail also criticized employers of the private sector for paying unnskilled workers wages higher than those paid to skilled workers in basic industry.

He said the fact that "wage levels in the forest industry in this province are the highest in the world" has given the industry reason to criticize recent settlements in other labor areas. He noted that rates cited in a recent advertisement for the Canadian Union of Public Employees are higher than those in forest products for equivalent jobs.

The letter asked the provincial government to provide leadership regarding the industry's problems which are related to a slump in markets.

The forest companies are scheduled to begin bargaining April 9 with the IWA, May 12 with the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada, and June 2 with the Canadian Paperworkers Union.

Thomson Papers' Union Rapped

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board Thursday issued a cease-and-desist order to members of the Vancouver Printing Pressmen's union withholding services at three newspapers in the interior.

Jack Moore, board vice-chairman, said in a letter to the union and to Thomson B.C. Newspapers Ltd. that the union's contract with the Vernon News does not expire until June 30 and therefore its pressmen have no right to strike.

Pressmen at the Penticton Herald and the Kelowna Courier, whose contracts expired Feb. 28, did not issue 72-hour strike notice and therefore their job actions are illegal, said Moore.

The three Thomson papers and a fourth, the Kamloops Sentinel, have not published since the pressmen struck the Sentinel March 18. Pressmen's contract expired Dec. 31 at the Sentinel. Base rate for the pressmen was $6.55 an hour.

Dave MacIntyre, pressmen spokesman, said he had not seen the order Thursday and could not comment. But he said the collective agreement at the Vernon News includes a clause allowing union members not to handle copy termed unfair by the union.

He said the strike at Kamloops led to the unfair declaration at the other papers.

Union members have been reporting for work daily at the three papers covered by the board judgment but have not handled copy.

The fifth Thomson newspaper in B.C., the Nanaimo Free Press, has not been affected. Its pressmen are represented by the stereotypers union.

Meanwhile, the mediator in a dispute between Thomson B.C. Newspapers Ltd. and Local 226 of the International Typographical Union made a report of non-settlement.

Charles Stewart said the main stumbling block remains reproduction of advertising material.

The company maintains that reproduction is a form of featherbedding and that it is not economically viable at its newspapers.

Private Hospitals Seek Rate Hike

VANCOUVER (CP)— Lauretta Shields, secretary of the British Columbia Private Hospitals Association, said Thursday that government support for welfare patients should be increased.

She said the welfare rates for private hospitals are $17.25 a day.

"But the cost of operating the government-run Dogwood intermediate care home in Burnaby is $23 a day for welfare patients — and that is for a lower level of care than a hospital provices," she said.

Mrs. Shields suggested $30 a day as a realistic figure for welfare patients.

She was commenting on a telegram to Health Minister Dennis Cocke and Human Resources Minister Norm Levi urging them to increase welfare payments. The telegram was signed by Russel Shepherd, president of the private hospitals association; Wayne Waddell, president of Western Canada Rest Home Association; and John Hanrahan, president of the B.C. Rest Home Association.

The telegram also urges the provincial government to subsidize private pay hospital patients.

Opinion Fights Poverty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public opinion is the key to government action for alleviation of poverty, says Leonard Shifrin, National Council of Welfare director.

"To influence public opinion is to influence policymaking," Shifrin said Thursday to about 25 persons at the University of British Columbia school of social work.

He said an example of the power of public opinion was the drastic modifications made to the 1966 Carter Commission Report on Taxation when legislation based on the report was enacted.

Reports issued periodically by his Ottawa-based welfare council have played a role in stirring up controversy.

The most recent, dealing with effects of poverty on youth, drew news and editorial coverage across the country and was the subject of debate in the Commons, he said.

Before The Judge

Crown prosecutor Clarence Vause said a witness phoned police to report a boat cruising in slow circles off the beach. By the time police arrived, the fishboat had run aground on a sandbar.

Kennaird told police he did not know where he was or whose boat he was on, Vause said.

The six-year commercial fisherman told Judge Harold Ostler he had been out fishing.

"I was trying to get home before the weather broke but pushed myself too hard and fell asleep. I was overly tired," Kennaird said.

Donald John Campbell, 20, of 1239 Park Terrace, who appeared before Judge William Ostler for sentencing, received a one-year jail term on three counts of breaking and entering and theft.

The sentence will run concurrently with the eight-month jail term set Wednesday by Alder for possession of known stolen property.

★ ★ ★

Arthur William Hawes, 31, of 3533 Saanich, who pleaded guilty last Thuresday to possession of a switchblade knife for a purpose dangerous to the public peace, was remanded to April 23 for presentence report and sentencing.

★ ★ ★

A 25-year-old Alberta man was remanded in custody to April 28 for a presentence report and sentencing after pleading guilty to 10 counts of uttering forged cheques.

David Martin McLaren had originally faced two charges involving 20 counts of uttering and a trial had been set. But McLaren changed his plea to guilty when the crown withdrew one of the charges.

The crown alleged McLaren passed cheques totalling $1,076.31 in Victoria last Aug. 19 and 20 using the name W. R. Smith.

Sidney Boat Dwellers Get Orders to Leave

People living on boats at Fishermen's Wharf in Sidney have been told to get out immediately because they are contributing to unsanitary conditions around the dock, Sidney municipal clerk Geoff Logan said today.

There are about six vessels being used as homes at the federal dock just off Resthaven Drive and their owners will have to find other docking facilities because of the Sidney order.

Logan said an order will be distributed today prohibiting use of the dock as a permanent moorage area.

The people living at the wharf are apparently contravening both federal and municipal regulations, Logan said. Although the dock is a federal facility, Sidney is responsible for its administration.

Sidney RCMP members and some members of the Sidney municpal staff went to the wharf earlier this week and informed the residents they would have to leave.

Some have apparently indicated they do not intend to leave.

Logan said the order would definitely be enforced and that it takes effect immediately "although if they're out next week that would probably be all right."

He said the municipality could "make arrangements to have them moved" if the residents are not out in time. "If they want to make a court case out of it, then they can."

A federal regulation prohibits anyone at the dock from dumping garbage or waste into the water and Logan says the people at Fishermen's Wharf are doing that. "We know they are because there is no other dumping facility."

The federal dock lease also states that Sidney is responsible for insuring there are no nuisance or disturbances around the dock "and the unsanitary conditions contribute to the nuisance," Logan said.

A Sidney bylaw makes it necessary for a boat to have a holding tank for sewage waste and to be hooked to a sewage facility, another thing the Fisherman's Wharf residents don't have, Logan said.

The bylaw requiring sewage hookup is enforced in other marinas in the municipality, Logan said, "so we have to do it here."

Sidney Ald. Wilkie Gardner said today the wharf was built specifically for fishermen who have first moorage rights in the winter, but when the fishing fleet is out in the summer the wharf is used for tourist docking.

Gardner said he understood there were some families with small children living in the boats.

Hospital Report Under Wraps

The chairman of the Regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission said today that a consultant's report recommending roles for district hospitals will not be made public.

Robert Wallace declined to specify why the 76-page report which the commission received last month from Agnew Peckham and Associates Ltd. won't be released but he said the commission believes "no useful purpose would be served" by making it public.

At the same time, he said, decisions on what roles area hospitals will be assigned by the commission stemming from the consultant's report "will certainly be public information."

The commission will likely make a public report on the matter at its next meeting April 16, he said.

At its inaugural meeting Dec. 18, the commission, which has authority to plan, build, move or discontinue hospital facilities throughout the Capital district, decided it would hold open meetings while reserving the right to deal with some business behind closed doors.

The last two meetings of the commission have been held in secret while the report on hospital roles, prepared by consultant Ronald McQueen, was considered. The report was given to the commission's two standing advisory committees, one a group of senior hospital administrators and the other a group of doctors, for study and comment.

The roles study by McQueen is one of a number he will be preparing. Agnew Peckham also has the job of preparing a master plan for hospital development in the Capital district and Wallace said today that as master planning is unfolding "the public will know all about it."

Aberdeen Purchase Backed

The regional hospital board and the provincial government appear to have reached agreement on cost-sharing in the purchase of Aberdeen private hospital.

The provincial government bought the private hospital on Hillside last month for $1.1 million but the regional hospital board, which is expected to provide 40 per cent of the purchase price, balked last week at rubber-stamping approval until it could be assured it would not face substantial additional costs bringing the hospital up to provincial standards.

Board chairman Art Young said today the board's executive met with the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service Thursday and will recommend to the board at its meeting next week regional approval of the purchase.

A survey of the hospital shows spending of about $25,000 would be needed to meet provincial standards, and the region has been told there is a good chance the province will agree to sharing this on the more favorable 60-40 formula, Young said.

Gov't Faces Scramble To Prepare Marguerite

The provincial government will have to scramble to get the Princess Marguerite ready to sail in six weeks.

The province bought the 27-year-old ship for what it considers a bargain price of $275,000 but the vessel is in some disrepair and a major overhaul is planned for next winter.

In the meantime, the government must find a general manager, hire a crew, plan the operation and carry out a superficial spring cleaning.

Resources Minister Bob Williams — the man who will be in charge of the independent ferry operation between Victoria and Seattle — got his first glimpse of the vessel Thursday.

It's in better shape than Williams said he expected and he hopes the ship can be extensively refurbished to bring back the grand old days of the steamship era.

"An interior designer could have a field day here," he said as he toured the cold, damp, tired interior of the ship.

Williams envisions sprucing up the bar area on the top deck with carpets and new curtains, softer chairs and sitting areas and general redecoration in old Victorian fashion.

The old dining room and ballroom areas could be returned to their former state and the long narrow glassed-in promenades refurbished by bringing up the teak decks and restoring the benches and deck chairs.

Music and other entertainment will likely be brought aboard and the dining and bar facilities upgraded.

The ship has been idle since last fall when Canadian Pacific decided the $100,000-a-year average operating losses were too much to bear.

Usually, the vessel only undergoes a six-week spring refit and this year will be no different, but the government has decided it needs much more than a cleaning and paint job.

Next winter's restoration project could run into hundreds of thousands of dollars but no official price tag has been put on the work.

Williams is convinced the government made a good deal in buying the ship for $275,000 within a total package of $2.475 million with 8.7 acres of waterfront property.

It was valued by CP at $250,000 for scrap and between $450,000 to $1 million as an operating ship. Replacement value today would run into the millions of dollars, said Williams.

The ship has room for 2,000 passengers and space on the lower two decks for up to 90 cars.

Besides restoring the daily run from Seattle to Victoria and back during the summer months, the government is considering a number of alternatives for operating the ship during the winter.

NDP Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst, who will head a citizen's advisory committee to make recommendations on the operation of the service, has suggested the ferry might run to the Lower Mainland during the winter.

The Seattle-Victoria service will be kept separate from the regular B.C. Ferry fleet and government officials indicate close tabs will be kept on its financial status. If it continues to lose a great deal of money, fares on the vessel will have to be raised.

Ask The Times

Q. I've heard a lot of stories about a woman ghost, supposed to haunt Uplands golf course. Is she the woman who was grossly murdered years ago? Has anyone ever seen her and when in the year does she appear? B.J.E.

A. We've heard a few stories too. This lady ghost is supposed to haunt the eighth hole of the Victoria golf course on Beach Drive where she has appeared (to some people) infrequently as an opaque misty image. One story has it she's the ghost of a woman whose murdered body was found there in the fall of 1936. The body of her husband, who had a drinking problem, was found drowned near the same area.

Early Trusses Homeowner's Last Straw

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

First it was the housebuilders pouring cement in the dark.

Then a tow truck was pulling a cement truck which had run out of gas.

And then the roof trusses arrived three weeks ahead of time.

"When these things happen, it starts to make you wonder," Charles Steffler, 3811 Dallimore in Metchosin, told county court Judge E. J. C. Stewart Thursday.

He and his wife Agnes are defendents in a mechanics lien claim for $8,598 brought by 3M Building Components Limited.

Also named as defendants were West Coast Savings Credit Union and South Island Drilling and Blasting Limited

W. R. Southward, counsel for Steffler, told the court the real issue involves Steffler and 3M and there is no issue involving the other two.

Vern Hildebrand, appearing for himself, told court he was the original founder of the company which was involved in component-building of houses. He said he is president of the company, which no longer is operating.

He said an agreement was signed in 1972 to build a component-type house for the Stefflers for $14,000 with completion in 45 days and $50 a day penalty if the compannny failed to meet the deadline.

Because of road and weather conditions, he said, the deadline wasn't met. But Steffler told him to keep off the property and "our claim is for work done by sub-contract and suppliers which Steffler does enjoy."

Hildebrand said the house was built to include basement, framing, exterior sheathing but not finishing, roof, windows, all doors except the front door, rough plumbing, rough electrical wiring and basement floor.

Still to be done were drywall sheathing, finishing, heating, cabinets, painting, aluminum siding and fireplace.

He estimated the cost of the remaining items to be $7,100.

The company, he said, realized money would be lost on the construction and was willing to pay a $50 a day penalty but on Dec. 4, 1972, the Stefflers told him to keep off the property and they would work to finish it themselves.

Given the weather conditions at the time, which included snow, he said it would have taken 15 working days to finish the job.

The house was about 60 per cent completed. He admitted the roof was "put on in a very bad way" and would cost $400 to re-do but this had been agreed to earlier.

Appraiser John Bosded said he carried out an appraisal of the job and, in a report, said construction to Dec. 15, 1972, represented 44 per cent completion.

He estimated the total cost at $22,400.

He said the interior partitioning was poor quality, spacing of studding was not consistent, studs were "rather short" with nails showing, the roof "not expertly installed at all" and the furnace in but "I saw no provision for chimney."

Today, he said, the house would be worth $35,000 to $45,000.

Steffler said he was at the building site almost daily but work was slow and several times he had to lend workers tools.

At one point a back wall collapsed and three yards of concrete had to be broken out. Another time the pre-built walls arrived without plans and there was a delay of two or three hours.

Two walls were installed out of plumb and some interior partitions are still crooked.

He said he gave 3M a total of $4,000. His family moved into the house Jan. 28, 1973. He finished off the roof and had the plumbing and wiring completed. He had also worked by himself since then to complete the job but it would still need $5,000 or $6,000 to finish according to the original specifications, he said.

Man Held Up At Bastion

A Vancouver man was held up by a knife-wielding man in Bastion Square Thursday morning, Victoria police reported today.

Hank Rook told police he was crossing the square at about 11:20 a.m. when a man came from behind and flashed a six-inch switchblade at him.

Rook said he gave him all he had — $160 — and the man, described as 6 feet 2 inches tall, 190 pounds, with reldish-blond hair, ran off. He was last seen heading down Wharf Street.

Practical Tactic

Strange tilt to MacMillan Bloedel plane in Inner Harbor gave it the appearance of limping into dock, but the tilt was done on purpose. By angling the pontoon on starboard side of the Grumman Goose, the craft can be brought up closer to the dock, a company spokesman explained.

Six-Year Term For Attacks

Roger Allan Lonsdale was sentenced in county court today to six years in the penitentiary for two counts of indecent assault and one of intercourse with a person under 14.

Lonsdale, 23, of 651 Dupplin, had pleaded guilty Feb. 17 to the charges and was held in custody pending sentence today by Judge E. J. C. Stewart.

First charge of indecent assault related to an incident Dec. 7 when he picked up two 17-year-old hitch-hikers and put a knife to the neck of one of them.

Lonsdale pulled a knife, and ordered her to lift her skirt. She objected, got out and called police.

On Nov. 25 he picked up a 13-year-old hitch-hiker and pulled a knife on her and intercourse took place in the back seat of the car on a road off the Malahat, court was told earlier.

Judge Stewart sentenced Lonsdale to three-year concurrent terms for indecent assault and six years for intercourse with a person under 14, the total to run concurrently.

He said he has "considerable sympathy" with Lonsdale whose actions were "probably due to some mental ailment", but he had even more sympathy for the victims.

Sympathy aside, he said, his primary duty is for the protection of the public.

He recommended that Lonsdale be screened as quickly as possible to find out if he is a suitable candidate for a remedial program in a medical centre in Abbotsford.

ESSO RAISES FUEL PRICES

Imperial Oil has raised its wholesale prices for gasoline and furnace oil by 2 cents a gallon, in line with new provincial guidelines.

Needed: An Unhandy Man's Home Guide

AMONG THE BOOKS I yearn to stumble on in my do-it-yourself blunderings is one which we'll entitle "The Unhandy Man's Guide! To the best of my knowledge, this manual has yet to be written, and that's a pity. Such a work would save me frustration, humiliation, and considerable knuckle skin.

I have any number of how-to books, written by professional craftsmen for the enlightenment of the handy amateur. But they share a common lack. They fail to tell the unhandy how to get himself out of the trouble that lurks for him behind even the simplest set of step-by-step instructions.

Somewhere in my collection of tips for the householder is a breezy dissertation on how to clean your own chimney and save a bill.

First you stuff some hay into a gunnysack.

Next, you add several good-sized stones.

Then you tie a rope around the neck of your sack, convey the apparatus to your roof, drop the sack into your chimney, and work it vigorously up and down with the rope.

The tipster, a conscientious fellow, adds several warnings. Make sure your fire is out to the last spark. Seal off your fireplace mouth if you would avoid a roomful of soot. Also, remember that scrambling about on a steep or damp roof is dangerous.

He should have added a further scrap of advice for the unhandy: what to do when the sack with the stones and the hay is deep in the chimney, and the rope lets go.

The Unhandy Man's Guide as I visualize it would provide for that contingency. Better still, it would point out in no uncertain terms that chimney-cleaning is best left to the experts.

Life's path for the determinedly inept and lefthanded is cluttered with projects that go astray. The shelf that leans, the leaking pipe-joint, the tippity garden bench that dumps the unwary on their backs — all tell the same story.

Here lives a well-meaning operator who might have pulled the job off handsomely if his instructor had chosen to walk the extra mile with him.

It isn't enough that he be told to spread the pattern on a table and cut along the dotted lines with sharp scissors. The Unhandy Man's Guide would warn him to slip a piece of plywood under that pattern so he won't do what a still-doghoused sore thumb of my acquaintance did to his wife's tablecloth.

One simple guideline of that sort would have kept me from contributing a low-comedy slide to the collection we occasionally inflict on visitors. It shows a worthy do-it-yourselfer staring at a carefully-constructed wooden hutch.

That's our smokehouse, and very well it serves us. I followed the list of instructions slavishly, reading some of them twice and even three times to make sure I wouldn't deviate from the plan.

With the last nail hammered, I called Win outside for a look. She walked twice around the smokehouse, eyeing it deadpan. Then she said, "That's dandy! Stay right where you are for a minute."

"I want to catch the look on your face," she said, "when you find you forgot to put a door in it!"

The Unhandy Man's Guide would show an awareness on every page that some of us were short-changed when the useful skills were passed out. It wouldn't, for example, tell a man with wrench in hand to loosen the nut, slip the whatsis up the hoozis, and seat the fanbelt on the pulleys. It would assume that the reader, an idiot in matters mechanical, hadn't a pig's idea of how to break the grip of a tough nut on a bolt.

(First you try a shot of freeing oil. Then you pound on the nut. If that doesn't work, you heat it and cool it. By this time your knuckles are flayed, the nut is battered to the point where the wrench won't engage it, and it's time to phone for a trouble-shooter.)

This brings us to the sub-title that should go on The Unhandy Man's Guide when some yet-unheralded benefactor of us dubs gets around to publishing it.

'Let George do it!' the subtitle will read.

Cougar Checking Trips Chiefs

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

KAMLOOPS — Bob Leslie was rushed back into service, Dan Lucas enjoyed a big night, and Western Canada Hockey League scoring champion Mel Bridgman continues to make Kamloops Chiefs pay for their penalties.

But a fan, heading home, may have come up with the best reason Victoria Cougars are back on even terms with Kamloops after four games in their quarter-final series:

It adequately describes the way the Cougars locked up Thursday's 5-3 victory before 3,456 fans — the largest crowd ever to witness a junior hockey game in Kamloops.

Now tied 2-2, the Chiefs and Cougars head for Victoria's Memorial Arena for the fifth game Saturday before returning to Kamloops for the sixth on Sunday.

Leslie, who bore the brunt of criticism after Kamloops won the first two games of the series, 6-4 and 4-3 in overtime, returned to tend Victoria's goal when rookie Jerry Simpson was injured in the third period.

Simpson, who took over in the nets Tuesday when the Cougars got back on the track with a 7-2 victory, started again Thursday but had to retire at the 6:31 mark of the third period when he suffered a pulled hamstring muscle in his right leg.

Cougars led 5-3 when Leslie returned to the pressure cooker. Neither referee nor his Cougar teammates allowed Leslie much of a warm-up. Referee Ron Fournier didn't because of the rules and the Cougars because of their awesome third-period checking performance.

Chiefs managed only three direct shots on the Victoria goal in the 13½ minutes Leslie worked. It took the Chiefs almost 6½ minutes to send their first shot at Leslie.

Two of the three shots came while Cougars played shorthanded for almost four successive minutes. After they rode out the successive penalties to Tim Williams and Rick Peter, while Kamloops had a two-man advantage for 21 seconds, the Cougars didn't give Chiefs much of a chance.

The one faint hope Kamloops did have was a breakaway by Neil Lyseng. But Leslie played Lyseng smartly, forced the Kamloops player to his backhand and the blond winger missed the target from close in.

The line of Peter, Al Hill and Irv Bowles sparked Victoria's prominent checking display. Roy, the Kamloops coach, originally tried to match his big line of Darryl Ferner, Brad Gassoff and Lyseng against Cougars' high-scoring combination of Bridgman, Lucas and Peter Morris.

It worked for a few shifts, then Victoria coach Pat Ginnell was able to sic the Peter Hill-Bowels unit against Kamloops' top scoring threats. Ferner scored the first two Kamloops' goals, both on power plays, but then his line was blanketed effectively by Ginnell's checkers.

Lucas got Victoria's attack going with the team's first goal, then drew assists on the next three goals, by Tim Williams, Eric Sanderson and Bridgman. Rick Martin added Victoria's final goal.

The game-winner by Bridgman was his sixth goal of the series, and all have come while Chiefs have been playing shorthanded.

Simpson had no chance on Ferner's goals but seemed to be fooled by defenceman Wayne Morin's long shot that tied the game 3-3 early in the second period.

The team doctor said Simpson's injury is "not as serious as it could have been."

Kamloops, however, continues to suffer more damaging injuries. They lost centre Ryan Walter in game No. 2 for the balance of the season. Jamie Gallimore, another forward, also has been sidelined for the rest of the series with a cut tendon on his right hand.

A third forward, Kelly Ferner suffered an eye injury in game No. 3. He was dressed Thursday but Roy didn't use him.

The effect of three missing players showed in the final period. Roy has been forced to rely heavily on only two lines and their weariness showed strongly in the late stages. That made it easier for the Cougars to completely frustrate the chiefs.

Ex-Park: Betting Boom Began With Tax Break

With "track works" appearing daily in the Vancouver press, can the start of the bangtail season be far behind? Not that anyone would notice, but three weeks from last Wednesday and the familiar voice of Jack Short will ring out:

"Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. Welcome to beautiful Exhibition Park. Here are the overweights and corrections."

And shortly thereafter this year's 101-day season will be off and running with the best bet being that once again Ex-Park fans will set wagering and attendance records. This has been the pattern for the past three years and there seems no reason to doubt it will continue.

The big rise in wagering, track publicity chief Harry Filion was saying, began in 1972 after the mutuel takeout was educed to 18.1 per cent. The handle went up a staggering 38 per cent that year.

Operators and horsemen at the time were unanimous in crediting the success with the reduction in the betting tax. Provincial legislation lowered the takeout from 21.6 per cent to 18.1 per cent. The government, in return, actually received more revenues from its eight per cent cut that year than from its 10.5 per cent of the previous year, increasing its share in 1972 approximately 5.7 per cent.

In 1973 the trend continued and the increase was 24 per cent. Last year a further 25 per cent was tacked on, and this was rather remarkable because there was a reduction of nine days in the racing calendar from 1973 when the season attendance of 913,778 mark was set.

Appenglow Glowed—Twice

This year, it is conceivable that crowd mark could tumble and over one million fans isn't considered to be totally out of the question. Certainly, it would have been considered more realistic if Vancouver city council had gone along with the suggestion of the B.C. Jockey Club to have five Sundays set aside for racing.

But council declined and so now only slightly more than $2 million will be there for the asking with stakes monies at a record $750,000. Which isn't bad, is it? And if you think horse racing is just for the bettors, perish the thought. Last year, for instance, total purses including added money to stakes, totalled $2,988,733 for the 100-day meeting.

Track empressario Jack Diamond, who is also an owner, just happens to have been the leading one too. Diamond's horses earned $125,110, topped of course by his fine three-year-old Battling Craig, who earned $67,715 by winning six of his 10 starts.

Some of the other incidentals may be interesting to the figure filberts. The biggest one-day mutuel handle was on the very last day, $1,113,467, on Oct. 14. The largest single-day attendance was 26,920 on Labor Dy, and the biggest single payoff was on Appenglow, $124.20, on Sept. 11. And obviously the punters really didn't think much of Appenglow at any time, because earlier in the year, on July 5, Appenglow combined with Aloha Spirit for a quinella of $420.20 for a $2 wager.

More and Better Horses

But if you think that was something to write home about, there was a much better payoff on a two-horse pool, the Exacta, on that same day, July 5. Gentle Sphere and Royal Alder ran one, two, and the lucky ticket holders were rewarded with $1,200.50. But that figure is peanuts compared to the track record. It was on May 11 in 1962 that Willy's Webb came down in front and Broxann was in the No. 2 hole. The payoff then was $4,092 for $2.

If there has been a shortage of horses at some tracks this year, it shouldn't happen at Ex Park. Filion says there are over 1,000 in training now plus others at two suburban training tracks and about 70 at Sandown.

It is also expected that there will be a better list of handicap horses for the feature events, and more of them as well. And even Victoria is about to be featured with the City of Victoria Handicap for three-year-olds on Sept. 20.

Why not? Because Victoria, or at least a part of it, takes a healthy slice of the cake each season. Last year, for instance, the boys downtown in Davey Barrett's house shared in the mutuel handle of $66,419,396 to the tune of over $5 million.

Big business? Sure, it is, and still rising. And now for one helpful hint as reprinted from the past and requested by the wife of one avid horseplayer.

Take money, sure. But never wager any more than you can afford.

Sabres Grab Point Lead; Hawks Keep Hopes Alive

By The Canadian Press

The National Hockey League heads into the final weekend of its regular schedule tonight with a number of playoff positions still undecided.

Thursday's results did little to clarify the picture.

Buffalo Sabres defeated Boston Bruins 4-2 to regain the over-all points leadership in the league but the Sabres could still be overtaken in that department by Montreal Canadiens or Philadelphia Flyers who have two games remaining while Buffalo has only one.

The Sabres have 111 points and Montreal and Philadelphia have 109 each.

The team finishing with msot points has the home-ice advantage throughout the playoffs.

Chicago Black Hawks defeated Kansas City Scouts 6-4 to move into a second-place tie with St. Louis Blues in the Smythe Division race. The Hawks and Blues have 80 points, four behind the leading Vancouver Canucks who could clinch the division title tonight when they play host to Minnesota North Stars.

The Black Hawks could take first place if they win their two remaining games and the Canucks lose.

Meanwhile, in Thursday's only other game, New York Rangers improved their playoff chances with a 1-1 tie at Philadelphia. Tonight the Rangers visit Atlanta Flames who must win if they hope to overtake the Rangers or New York Islanders for a playoff spot in the Patrick Division.

The tie pulled the Rangers even with the Islanders, each with 86 points, three ahead of Atlanta.

Rick Martin scored two goals — his 50th and 51st of the season — during second-period power plays to lead Buffalo against the Bruins. Rick Dudley added his 31st of the season and Fred Stanfield his 19th.

Phil Esposito opened the scoring for Boston with his 61st of the season and Don Marcotte scored his 30th in the third period.

Martin became the fourth player to reach the 50-goal mark this season. The others are Esposito, Danny Grant of Detroit Red Wings and Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens.

At Chicago, J. P. Bordeleau also scored two second-period goals and assisted on another by defenceman Phil Russell to lead the Hawks. Stan Mikita, Jim Pappin and Grant Mulvey added single goals for the Hawks. Simon Nolet scored twice for Kansas City.

Jean Ratelle scored for the Rangers after only 15 seconds of the game at Philadelphia but Bobby Clarke tied the score for the Flyers later in the first period.

Clarke said after the game he still hopes the Flyers can finish with the high points total because of the home-ice advantage.

"It meant something to us last year," said Clarke, recalling that the Flyers didn't lose a home game enroute to the Stanley Cup championship.

"I think it's important. It could be important in the early series, but I don't think it is if you reach the final.

"Once you get that far, nothing should help you or hurt you but the other team. Once you get that far you should be concentrating so hard that the crowd or nothing else should distract."

BOXERS RESUME PLAYOFF SERIES

London Boxing Club needs one more win to capture the Island senior "B" men's basketball championship and Saturday the team gets its first chance.

Boxers take on Port Alberni Timbermen at Royal Oak Junior High School in the second game of their best-of-three series. The Victoria squad whipped the Timbermen 81-70 in the first encounter last weekend.

Should a third game be necessary it will take place Sunday at Royal Oak starting at 1:30.

Boxers are also deadlocked with Hotel Douglas at one game apiece in their best-of-three final for the Victoria Senior "B" Men's League championship. The final game will be played Monday at 8 p.m. at Royal Oak.

Ellis Back In Form; Stargell Belts Homer

By The Associated Press

Dock Ellis has picked up this spring where he left off last fall and that may be just what the doctor ordered for Pittsburgh Pirates.

Ellis allowed three hits and two unearned runs over the first seven innings Thursday in the Pirates' 3-2 exhibition triumph over Chicago White Sox. In 36 innings this spring he has allowed only one earned tally.

Last July 10 Ellis' record was 3-8 with a 4.54 earned run average. Starting with a 3-1 triumph over Houston on July 15, he won eight consecutive games and nine of 10. During that 9-1 stretch he pitched seven complete games and went into the ninth inning of two others. His ERA was 1.91.

But his season came to an end Sept. 11 when a line drive off the bat of Philadelphia's Willie Montanez fractured his right wrist.

The Pirates defeated the White Sox when Willie Stargell, who earlier belted a solo homer, singled home the winning run in the eighth inning following Richie Hebner's triple.

Elsewhere on the exhibition trail it was Oakland A's 10, Los Angeles Dodgers 9; San Diego Padres 2, Cleveland Indians 0; Baltimore Orioles 6, Kansas City Royals 4; Cincinnati Reds 3, Detroit Tigers 1; New York Yankees 7, New York Mets 3; St. Louis Cardinals 10, Houston Astros 5; Minnesota Twins 2, Boston Red Sox 1; Montreal Expos 4, Philadelphia Phillies 3; Chicago Cubs 6, Milwaukee Brewers 4; Atlanta Braves 3, Richmond of the International League 2.

Soccer Variety

Soccer won't be the only item on the agenda when Vancouver Whitecaps meet Los Angeles Aztecs in a North American League exhibition game Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

Musical entertainment, provided by Royal Roads Officer Cadet Band, will open festivities at 7:15 p.m. and will be followed at 7:30 by a fun game between C-FAX staff and Chew "Excavators." The two pro teams will then warm up at 7:40 with opening ceremonies slated for 7:50. The game will start at 8 p.m.

At half-time, four teams from the Lower Island Juvenile Soccer Association will play 10-minute exhibition games. The second half will resume at 8:55 p.m.

McDonald Leads Junior Tourney

A four-handicapper who turns 19 May 1, McDonald toured his home course in a three-over-par 41-34-75 for a three-stroke margin over runner-up Jim Rutledge of Cedar Hill, the reigning city junior champion.

Roy Harrington of Cedar Hill, Brad McLeod of Uplands, Aaron Fredrickson of Nanaimo and Carl Ovcharick of Glen Meadows tied for third with 80s.

All but Fredrickson are eligible for Victoria's six-member team which will compete in the Vancouver Island Junior Golf League, which starts Saturday at Nanaimo. Ted Boomer replaces Fredrickson and Dave Howe will take McDonald's place after May 1.

Dave McDonagh of Royal Colwood was the low net winner in the field of 106.

Ali Goes on Home TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali will appear in the nation's living rooms in May, but fans probably will have to go to the theatre to watch him perform in September.

"The fight is on, the money is up," Herbert Muhammad, Ali's manager, said Thursday in Chicago about an Ali title defence against Ron Lyle in Las Vegas May 16, which will be shown live on home television by ABC.

"Terms are agreeable and we will sign a contract," said Irwin Rosee, Lyle's manager of record, who added that he had talked with Lyle's business partner, Bill Daniels.

Ali will get $1 million and Lyle $100,000.

Soviets, Czechs Win First Games

MUNICH, Germany (AP) — Heavily-favored Russia overcame a stubborn young United States team, 10-5, Thursday in an opening match at the world ice hockey, Group "A" championship.

The Americans, playing in the group for the first time in five years, scored the first goal and led 2-1 early in the first period before the 13-time world champion Soviets ripped off three goals in less than two minutes for a lead they never surrendered.

In an earlier game, Czechoslovakia scored three goals in the second period and routed Poland, 5-0.

The Czechs, co-favored with the Soviets, overwhelmed the Poles with brilliant passes in a strong attack to earn the first two points in the 16-day series.

Jenny to Lead Selects

Victoria players will form one-third of the 15-member Canadian team which is scheduled to compete in the world women's field hockey championship tournament Aug. 28 to Sept. 10 in Edinburgh, Scotland.

In addition, three Victorians were selected to the reserve squad from which players will be chosen if any selected player isn't able to make the trip.

Jenny John, the former national playing coach, has been named captain of the squad which will be coached by another Victorian, Brenda Read.

Other Victoria players picked for the team are Shelly Winter, who is attending the University of British Columbia, Diane Whittingham, Ann Bover and Jan Crook, who was named University of Victoria's rookie-of-the-year last Friday.

Named as reserves are Leslie and Michele Williams and Shirley Kirkley of Victoria, Sue Peck of Toronto, Sandy Drever of Calgary and Katie Didkowski of Halifax.

The Canadian team will tour Austria and Scotland prior to the 24-nation tournament and is cheduled to visit Switzerland and Holland after the tourney is over.

Excellent Salmon Returns Around Greater Victoria

Both freshwater and salt-chuck fishing has started to pick up in a number of Vancouver Island areas during the past week.

And some of the best salmon fishing is still found around the Greater Victoria waterfront.

Carman Angus caught four chinooks in the 10-pound bracket Tuesday while fishing deep with minnow off Secretary Island. Similar reports have come in from other fishermen in that area, where the odd blueback is also showing up.

Becher Bay continues to produce an average of 25 to 30 chinooks per week over the 10-pound mark along with numerous smaller fish and a few blues. Chinooks weighing up to 23 pounds have been landed recently by trolling strip or minnow in 60 to 100 feet of water between Aldridge Point and Beechey Head.

Bedford Island waters have also yielded some good catches.

Pedder Bay guide Walter Burford managed to boat a 25-pounder Sunday while trolling fairly deep with a minnow in the mouth of the bay. The chinooks aren't running quite as deep now and some good catches of blues up to three pounds have been taken at the 40-foot level.

Fishermen venturing out from Victoria or Oak Bay have found Constance Bank the hottest spot. Limit catches of chinooks averaging nine pounds and ranging up to 18 have been taken by trolling strip and hootchies close to the bottom. Other good returns were reported from Brotchie Ledge, Macaulay Point, Trail Island and Discovery Island.

Constance may be easily found on a clear day by lining up the observatory on Little Saanich Mountain and Ogden Point grain elevator on your left and the radio towers on Chatham and Trial islands on your right. Fish the area where these two lines intersect. A sounder, of course, will pinpoint the bank precisely. And keep a sharp eye on the weather!

In Saanich Inlet, chinooks up to 12 pounds have been landed in Tod Inlet and blues to three pounds are biting on small spoons and hootchies at all depths throughout the area.

Bucktail flies, flashtails and spinner-and-worms are responsible for pulling in a lot of blues near the surface throughout Finlayson Arm.

Sansum Narrows is giving up good catches of grilse and blues while Nanaimo fishermen are hauling in limits of blues on surface gear from close-in waters as well as the odd chinook on strip from about the 200-foot depth.

Chinooks up to 15 pounds are sparking a flurry of activity all over the mouth of Alberni Inlet.

★ ★ ★

Other blueback catches are being landed well offshore at Comox and some hefty cod have been hauled in around Stuart Island at the mouth of Bute Inlet.

Fishermen in the Campbell River area are experiencing ever-better catches of chinooks that tip the scales to 15 pounds by trolling either strip or flashtail with four ounces of weight near Willow Point.

Waters off the dock area in Kelsey Bay continue to produce fantastic returns of blues between 6 and 9 a.m. along with a few chinooks up to 16 pounds.

Steelheading success is starting to pick up in the top end of the Cowichan River as well as in Somass and Sarita rivers and Coleman Creek.

Most of the streams in the Courtenay area are also starting to produce better catches, but other Island rivers remain low because of freezing night-time temperatures.

Trout anglers will be happy to note both cutthroat and rainbow are being taken on bait in the upper reaches of the Cowichan.

Cowichan Lake is yielding some good trout returns around the creek mouths and Dougan's Lake is also starting to perk.

The drop-off where Taylor River drains into Sproat Lake is producing trout to six pounds on a sinken fly. Cary's Special has been a favorite pattern.

SKILL IN TRAPS helped Tom Weiskopf to first-round lead Thursday in Greater Greensboro tournament with seven-under-par 64. Shown hitting one out of sand to save par at 18th green, Weiskopf had earlier hole out one shot from bunker for birdie. (AP Wirephoto)

Mariners Wrap Up Berth; Whalers in Playoff Form

By The Canadian Press

New England Whalers demonstrated Thursday that they are ready for the World Hockey Association playoffs while San Diego Mariners finally clinched a playoff berth.

The Whalers showed their playoff form in a 4-1 win over Quebec Nordiques while San Diego defeated Baltimore Blades 9-2.

"We're playing playoff hockey right now," said acting coach Jack Kelley of the Whalers who clinched the Eastern Division title last month. "These last few games are just as important as playoff games and we're going all out to win them."

The Whalers scored their third straight victory under Kelley, the team's general manager, since he took over the coaching job from ailing Ron Ryan.

The win moved the Whalers into second place behind Houston Aeros in the over-all point standings, which determine playoff pairings and home ice advantage.

New England is 43-28-5 for 91 points, while Quebec slipped into third place with a 45-32-0 record and 90 points. The Whalers have two regular season games left, while the Nordiques have one.

"Playoff hockey is positional hockey," Kelley said. "If you get a lead you try to protect it. We built a three-goal advantage in the middle of the second period and were content to play it tight. We never let Quebec back in the game."

Veterns Don Blackburn and Wayne Carleton did most of the damage for the Whalers. Blackburn scored two goals and added an assist and Carleton added one goal and three assists. Tom

At San Diego, the Mariners took over sole possession of second place in the Western Division with 87 points, two ahead of Minnesota Fighting Saints and three ahead of Phoenix Roadrunners.

'Just Matter of Time'

"You can't just keep on playing that good, playing winning golf, championship golf, and not win," Weiskopf said Thursday referring to his long string of second-place finishes. "It's just a matter of time before it happens."

Weiskopf, who hasn't won since 1973, made that evident Thursday with a seven-under-par 64 in bad weather and a three-stroke lead in the first round of the $225,000 Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament.

The winds gusted to 50 miles an hour, seven full-grown pines were knocked down and branches were scattered all over the 6,643-yard Sedgefield Country Club course. One player quit because he said it was dangerous and the scoring headquarters was abandoned because two huge trees appeared ready to topple on it.

"I saw one 80-foot pine tree laid out level," said Dave Hill, alone in second after a 67.

Arnold Palmer and Sam Snead, an eight-time winner of the event, matched 77s. South African Gary Player, the Masters and British Open champion, had 76. Billy Casper shot 79. Defending title-holder Bob Charles carded a 75.

Lee Trevino managed a par 71 and Miller had a 72 despite consecutive double bogeys. Jack Nicklaus is not competing.

The Canadian contingent was led by George Knudson of Toronto who shot a 75. Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg had a 77 while Ben Kern of Toronto and Dan Halldorson of Brandon, Man., each shot 79.

Weiskopf was the only man in the field to escape without a bogey, scored three deuces and holed one shot from a bunker. He missed only three greens in the blustery winds.

High-Scoring Clubs Clash With Top Defensive Teams

It will be potent attackers against defensive experts this weekend in semi-final action in the premier division of the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

Victoria West and Nanaimo City, the top-scoring clubs, have been drawn against University of Victoria Vikings and London Boxing Club, the two teams allowing the fewest goals.

Vic West and the Vikings will play at 2 p.m. Saturday at Royal Athletic Park, while the league-champion Boxers will meet Nanaimo at 2 p.m. Sunday on the same pitch.

The second-place Vikings gave up just 17 goals in 18 games this season, while fourth-place Vic West, led by 19-goal scorer Robbie Williams, tallied 73 in 18 contests.

Boxers' goalkeeper Kjeld Brodsgaard topped the league with eight shutouts and allowed only 17 goals during the season, while Nanaimo pumped in 57 goals in its 18 games.

All four clubs will also meet in Jackson Cup semi-finals later this month to determine the Island representative for the Province Cup playoffs.

Nanaimo City and Vic West will tangle April 19 and the Vikings will take on the Boxers the following day. Both contests will be at Royal Athletic Park.

The Jackson Cup final will take place April 27 with the winner playing host to the Fraser Valley champions in the Province Cup semi-finals May 3.

The winner will meet the winner of the Okanagan-B.C. Soccer League semi-final later in May.

In Division II playoffs this weekend, Saanich Jaycees will play Vic West in a semi-final at Heywood Avenue Park, while UVic Norsemen take on Island Pacific Oilers at Topaz Park. Both matches start at 2:15 p.m. Sunday.

Talks Revive Hope in NHL For Sale of Hockey Seals

MONTREAL (CP) — Negotiations for the purchase of California Seals from the National Hockey League by a San Francisco group are continuing, league president Clarence Campbell said Thursday.

Contrary to an earlier report, Campbell said, the negotiations have not advanced to where the group — headed by San Francisco hotel owner Mel Swig and Charles Schulz, creator of the Peanuts comic strip — has made a firm offer to purchase the league-operated club.

Campbell said Swig has authorized his attorney to forward a preliminary draft of what could be construed as a letter of intent to purchase.

"It is not a firm offer," Campbell said. "To let the situation develop is as much our desire as theirs."

The NHL re-purchased the Seals franchise from former owner Charles O. Finley in February, 1974, for an estimated $6.5 million. Campbell would give no indication what price would be asked of the San Francisco group.

He said the group appeared ready to operate the team in the publicly-owned Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum until a suitable building could be built in San Francisco.

The Seals have been plagued by poor attendance since the club joined the NHL in its initial expansion in 1967. The team also has been hampered by generally poor on-ice performance.

Earlier this year Campbell estimated that California losses at $10,000 a day. He said the league could not afford to continue running the team because "we'd bleed to death."

The Seals missed the playoffs this year, finishing last in the four-team Adams Division. They have been in the playoffs twice since their inception — in 1969 and 1970 — but lost in the quarter-final round of the Stanley Cup competition both times.

Last year Seattle and Denver groups were granted conditional expansion franchises for the 1976-77 season, but both later expressed interest in purchase of the Seals as an early means of entry to the league next season.

As yet neither group has managed to complete the deal.

After a meeting of the league's expansion committee in New York last month, Ivan Mullenix of Denver was granted an expansion franchise for 1975. The Denver group had offered to purchase the Seals with an eye to moving the team to the Colorado city next season.

The 1975 expansion franchise was granted as an alternative to moving the Seals from their current California area, a move long opposed by league governors.

If Mullenix complies with a May 15 financial deadline imposed by the league for his 1975 entry, the Denver club for next season will be stocked at an expansion draft here in June. He retains the right of first refusal in any sale of the Seals.

Stags' Group Sued by WHA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The World Hockey Association has sued the owners of the Michigan Stags hockey team and two of its general partners for $5 million, charging fraud and breach of contract.

The suit, filed Wednesday in federal court in Detroit, alleges that Metro-Sports Associates of Detroit, owners of the Stags, intentionally misrepresented its financial position as part of a plan to obtain league approval for transfer of the Los Angeles Sharks franchise.

The Stags have since been transferred to Baltimore.

The WHA complaint charges that within weeks after it bought the Sharks, Metro-Sports was in default of its purchase contract with the former owner and was also in default in its obligations to the league. The WHA suit says Metro-Sports failed to pay league assessments, including player insurance and pension contributions, and failed to repay loans made by the league.

The suit also names two general partners of Metro-Sports, Chalres Nolton and Peter Shagena.

CEDAR HILL TO STAGE TOURNEY SUNDAY

Cooler-than-usual spring weather is assisting directors of Cedar Hill Golf Club in plans to proceed with club tournaments despite the labor dispute that has disrupted maintenance work at the Saanich municipal course.

Grass has grown slowly this spring and, with the course still in reasonable condition, directors will launch the 1975 competition schedule Sunday with the Cedar Hill Trophy event.

Match committee members will be at the first tee Sunday at 8:30 a.m. to accept entries from members and arrange starting times for the 18-hole, handicap tournament.

Handicap confirmations will be available.

Amateur Events Get New Format

TORONTO (CP) — Amateur golfers participating in national competitions this year will get a break — reduction from six to four days in playing time and elimination of playoffs to decide team championships.

The Royal Canadian Golf Association has decided to combine team and individual competition in the first two days of the Canadian amateur at Riverside Country Club in Saint John, N.B., Aug. 13-16.

The national junior championship will use the same format at Gorge Vale Golf Club in Victoria Aug. 27-30.

Formerly the Willingdon Cup interprovincial team competition was staged on two days preceding the start of the four-day individual amateur championship.

In the event of a tie in the Willingdon Cup play there will not be extra holes. Instead the best three scores of the four-member teams will be used to determine a winner.

The RCGA has decided to replace the handicap system for national junior and juvenile championships with a qualifying system. Junior qualifiers must average 10 shots or less above course ratings in the 36-hole provincial junior tournaments while juveniles are allowed 12. The national juvenile championship will be held at the same course and same time as the junior.

Car Dealers Mum on Extended Warranties

OTTAWA (CP) — Thousands of car owners are paying to repair basic production defects after normal new-car warranties expire, unaware that major auto companies operate secret programs to pay some of these costs through their dealers, a Montreal consumer protection group says.

The Automobile Protection Association (APA) calls the auto industry practice "a secret extension of the normal warranty." It wants the government to require companies to disclose publicly any repairs they are prepared to make after a warranty has expired.

The auto companies term these repairs—authorized orally or by bulletins to dealers—as "gratuitous payments" or part of a "goodwill program" for customers. They do not consider them extensions of the usual warranty of 12,000 miles of 12 months, says APA.

With rare exceptions, owners are not directly notified that they can get repairs free or on a part-payment basis with their dealer for specific jobs, even though the basic warranty has expired, says APA. In some Toyota models, for example, cracks in the engine head are covered for up to five years or 50,000 miles, says a company bulletin dated Nov. 15, 1974, and sent to U.S. dealers.

A member of the Consumers' Association of Canada says it too is concerned about owners who are unaware that companies extend protection after the basic warranty expiry. It intends to publicize the fact through its monthly publication.

The APA says it has obtained copies of several extended policy bulletins sent to Toyota dealers in the United States, of extended policy programs and special adjustment bulletins sent by Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. to its Ford-Mercury dealers and a special policy form sent by General Motors of Canada Ltd.

The GM policy bulletin covers engine overheat service of 1971-74 Vegas and Astres, "regardless of previous or present ownership," that was made public by the company, says APA.

In the case of the bulletins to U.S. Toyota dealers, the extended policy coverage is limited to owners who apply for it, or are told by their dealer about it, before June 30, 1975, says APA.

A spokesman for Canadian Motor Industries Ltd., CMI, exclusive Toyota importer and distributor in Canada, says it does not send out bulletins, but assures that CMI has similar polcies to protect Toyota owners. These were put into effect through its five regional offices.

The APA says it intends to challenge in Quebec small claims court the validity of any apparent warranty extension that limits the company's liability to a particular date. Small claims court can handle cases involving up to $300.

The APA says an extended policy bulletin represents an admission of "a performance-related defect" for which an owner can recover any loss, even if it happens after the company-stipulated expiry date.

The companies say they reserve the discretionary right to decide when a customer shall receive service after the normal warranty expiry, even when a particular problem has been identified. As for the fact that some owners may not know they qualify for extended service: "If they would go back to their dealers, they would know this," a Ford of Canada spokesman says.

The APA says it wants Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet to require auto companies to put a copy of any special adjustment bulletins to dealers on file with the department. The information then could be made available through the department's monthly publication, Consumer Contact.

The bulletins to U.S. Toyota dealers, dated Nov. 15, 1974, and called extended policy documents, cover a wide variety of possibile problems an owner might encounter after the basic 12-months or 12,000-miles warranty is up.

The most extended coverage is the five years or 50,000 miles for cylinder head cracks. But in addition, the bulletins also authorize dealers to claim 100 per cent parts and labor coverage from the company for 24 months or 24,000 miles for a variety of repairs, including:

—Replacing the engine block on some models.

—Repairs to oil pump drive shafts, of external oil leaks, rough engine idle and erratic hot engine stalling, time chain sprockets, and noisy station wagon differentials.

The bulletins sent by Ford of Canada to Ford-Mercury dealers, which APA says it has obtained, all concern problems with its imported Capri, and in certain cases with subcompact Pintos and imported Cortinas. Some of the adjustment programs already have expired.

One bulletin authorizes dealers to submit "full standard claim value for parts, handling and labor" to correct disc brake squeal on 1971-73 Capris built before Jan. 2, 1973. The bulletin says this is effective from April 17, 1974, until further notice, says APA.

Another bulletin, dated July 15, 1972, and which expired Feb. 28, 1973, was to correct excessive oil consumption in all 1971 Capris and Pintos and 1972 Cortinas with 2.0 litre engines. It covered parts and labor for the required repairs up to 24,000 miles.

The bulletin sent by General Motors of Canada was exceptional, because owners were informed about it by letter. It is labelled a "special engine overheat policy" and covers 1971 through 1974 subcompact Vegas and Astres, effective from last June 1.

Dealers were asked to give special consideration for owners, even if they bought their cars used, for problems with "head gasket, cylinder head, engine block replacement, engine block reconditioning, fitted block replacement, partial engine assembly replacement, necessary related gaskets and labor allowances for installing the components."

A General Motors spokesman said this was limited to autos driven no more than 50,000 miles. Owners were asked to bring their cars in to have a special coolant recovery system installed free, and if they had problems because of earlier engine overheating, General Motors was prepared to consider paying for repairs.

'False Sense of Security'

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

The 2.2-per-cent reduction in 1974, the first in more than two decades, was hailed with "delight" by Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, whose department came up with the statistical evidence Wednesday.

But to suggest, as Morton did, that this could be the start of something—"a new trend" premature to say the least.

Not only are Americans consuming more this year, they are also more dependent upon imported oil and gas than ever before.

There are other signs, apart from the upbeat tone of Morton's report, of a false sense of security about energy in the U.S.

Even President Gerald Ford, who issued his version of a policy in January, seems to have dropped the subject, his 90-day "deadline" for congressional action forgotten.

There was plenty of congressional talk, at least four rival "policies" and several hundred bills on various energy matters, most of these conflicting. But the only action was a tax measure reducing the depletion allowance for oil companies.

As spring blossoms in the northeast, gasoline is plentiful, heating oil tanks are full after a relatively mild winter and it is difficult to think in terms of an energy "crisis."

Morton's report will probably enhance the energy euphoria. A close reading, however, discloses all kinds of danger signals.

First, the reduction in energy consumption was largely attributable to factors such as the Arab oil embargo, mild weather, and economic conditions, including higher prices and the slide into recession.

After taking these into account, the reduction achieved through active conservation appears to be fractional.

It is more meaningful to compare the current situation with pre-embargo conditions.

Such a comparison shows that crude oil imports continue to climb—they are up almost a million barrels a day—and that imports account for an increasing proportion of U.S. needs.

These import increases are not coming from old-reliable Canada, which is steadily cutting it oil supplies to the U.S., but from less politically-secure sources—the sources on which the U.S. is supposed to be reducing dependence, not increasing it.

At the same time, domestic oil production in the U.S. is still declining. Right now, it is seven-per-cent lower than it was a year ago, a point not stressed by secretary Morton's report.

Natural gas supplies are also declining, with domestic production down more than three per cent and imports—i.e. gas from Canada—down nine per cent.

Current energy demand, the closest indicator to actual consumption, which takes much longer to calculate—is running about four-per-cent higher than a year ago.

There is plenty of oil in the Middle East, of course, if the U.S. wants to continue relying on that, which it doesn't.

So the real problem remains to be solved—how to build up alternative supplies while reducing consumption.

Perhaps when Congress returns to work next week, there will be a new effort to tackle energy policy.

All it would take to activate a latent crisis would be another Middle East flareup and given the situation there, that seems a distinct possibility.

Guard Blew Cover

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A former security guard for billionaire Howard Hughes admitted Thursday that he unwittingly set off a chain of events that blew the cover of one of the most expensive and elaborate syp schemes in history.

"It was just an absent-minded thing," Davis told authorities Thursday. "Whew, am I glad to get that off my chest."

Davis said it all began when he was bound and gagged by burglars who ransacked the files in Hughes' personal communications centre "Romaine" last June 5.

After the burglars left, Davis said, he noticed some papers on the florr and absent-mindedly stuffed them in his pocket.

One of the papers, he said, was a $100,000 certificate. The other was a memo outlining a secret contract whereby Hughes agreed to front for CIA, by pretending to build an "ocean mining research vessel" called the Glomar Explorer.

Actually, the ship was owned and run by the CIA and was built, at an estimated cost of $400 million, to retrieve a Russian submarine.

Mill Choice Widens

Prince George has been added to the list of sites being considered for a steel mill in B.C., according to Alf Nunweiler, minister responsible for northern affairs.

The minister said Thursday there are now six areas being considered as possible sites by the joint Japanese-B.C. study group investigating the feasibility of establishing a small mill in the province.

There are advantages and disadvantages in locating the mill near Prince George, rather than the other five area, said Nunweiler.

Those other areas include 11 specific sites around Roberts Bank, Prince Rupert, Kitimat, Qualicum and Fort St. John.

Advantages of the Prince George site are its large population, its access to arterial transportation and energy routes and the availability of municipal servicing, said Nunweiler.

Chief among the disadvantages of the area are its relation to sources of iron ore and the international market for steel, he added.

"It appears likely that the major portion of the international market will have to be reached by ship," he said, "and this puts Prince George in an awkward position, since locating here would necessitate rail shipment to tidewater."

The study of steel sites is part of the major investigation being conducted by the provincial economic development department and Nippon Kokan KK Company of Japan, which is interested in investing in a small steel operation.

Work-at-Home Rackets Show New Twist

By LYNNE GORDON

As money gets tighter, watch for a strong re-appearance of the old, phoney work-at-home rackets with a few new twists.

The elderly and the disabled even young parents stuck at home with the kids, are especially vulnerable to fast-buck artists' promises of easy ways to make a little extra money.

Usually the work-at-home schemes appear in the classified advertising sections of newspapers and magazines. Since the papers, or magazines can't screen all the ads to see which are honest and which are phony, it's important that you're alert to the danger signals and recognize the rip-offs.

The ads are hard to resist when they tempt you with "great profits for little work"; "guaranteed market for your product"; "no experience necessary." Thousands fall for this kind of bait and the companies bank on the theory that each "sucker" only loses a few bucks and will be too embarrassed to complain to proper authorities.

The few dollars you lose may not be a fortune but it represents a loss of your hard-earned money, hours of frustration, a dream that never materialized. But it represents millions of dollars to the company.

Let's take a look at some of these rackets so you can learn to ask questions before you get hooked.

The rackets cover anything from crocheted baby booties to bronzed baby shoes, addressing envelopes to laminating news clippings, machine knitting, rug weaving and invisible mending.

The red flag goes up when you're asked to lay out a chunk of money for a work kit that you're expected to assemble in the home. Of course you can only buy the kit from the company.

Another tip-off comes with the phrase: "We will buy the finished product from you if it meets our standards." You believe that there is a ready market for the items, so you buy the equipment and materials and get to work. When the time comes for "approval," you find that this "doesn't meet our standards." You're urged to try again, buy more materials, spend more money. Before long you'll find out that nothing will ever meet their standards and you're in the hole for about $50 or more.

Another way to make a deal with you is to sell you the kits and "hints" on how to go about getting orders for the finished product from stores in your neighborhood. Another dead end. Most stores have established suppliers and are cautious about dealing with an unknown quantity. You may end up trying to peddle your wares at inflated prices to friends and neighbors.

Addressing envelopes seems like a natural work-at-home job. You'll pay about $5 for information, presuming that the company has outlets for you and all you need to do is to send for instructions. You'll get a mimeographed sheed of instructions on how to address envelopes and "tips" on where to sell your services. You'll be advised to "check your neighborhood doctors, lawyers and businessmen." Another dead end. Most firms that have a large envelope addressing needs are well equipped with secretaries and machinery that can do the job cheaper than you can in your home.

You can earn extra money in the home but your choices are limited. Legitimate operators will deliver the merchandise to your home at no cost to you and pay you for the work they assign. This may include such things as bookkeeping, proof reading or collating.

Before you take the bait, do your homework and ask yourself these questions:

1. How much is the scheme or "secret" going to cost?
2. What will I purchase and what will I sell?
3. Can I make any money at it? Is there a market for the product? Who does the selling?
4. What does the local Better Business Bureau and the Consumer Protection Bureau know about the scheme?

Work-at-home rackets are legal — They operate just within the law. Fraudulent mail-order operations can be stopped by postal authorities but fraud is hard to prove. The moment one racket has been rooted out, another sprouts in its place under a different name but with the same gimmick.

Because the amount of money may be small, consumers who have been "had" are embarrassed to report the incident to authorities.

Don't be. It's your responsibility to call the Consumer Protection Bureau and the Better Business Bureau. Even if you can't get your money back, you'll help in cleaning up the marketplace.

Wild Foods Cost Cutters

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

By JOHN SHUTTLEWORTH

If there ever was a year custom made for the foraging of wild foods, this seems to be it. The economy of almost every industrialized nation, as we all know, is now mired in the worst slump since the 1930s. And the soaring price of food — which, to be sure, has levelled off temporarily — is now holding steady at astronomical levels.

Little wonder, then, that thousands of people who hardly knew crab grass from alfalfa last summer are now cutting their cost of living by harvesting hundreds of "free for the eating" wild foods.

You, too, can share in this bounty. It's not as difficult as you might think and many of the volunteer vegetables you can forage are surprisingly nutritious and delicious.

One of the best of all early spring wild foods is asparagus. And, if you've never foraged any of your table fare before, it's a nearly ideal plant to learn on. Wild asparagus looks just like the cultivated variety and it's difficult to imagine anyone confusing it with anything that could in any way be harmful to eat.

As a matter of fact, wild asparagus was one of the first volunteer vegetables foraged by wild food expert Euell Gibbons . . . and his recollection of how he taught himself to positively recognize the plant is a classic set of instructions for any would-be gatherer of foraged fare.

Euell was just a 12-year-old living in New Mexico at the time. "I was walking along an irrigation ditch on a bright Saturday in spring," he says, "when I happened to look down and accidentally spy a clump of asparagus growing on the bank."

Within seconds young Gibbons had whipped out his pocketknife and begun cutting off the half dozen fat little spears of the tasty vegetable. And even as he harvested the tender tips, Euell spotted another clump of asparagus . . . and another . . . and yet another.

It was then that Gibbons noticed that year-old, dry stalk stood in the middle of each group of fresh asparagus tips. "I figured if I could learn to distinguish those old asparagus stalks from the surrounding dried debris," he now remembers, "I'd be able to locate the otherwise-hidden young spears from a distance."

So, right then and there, young Euell Gibbons did a remarkably intelligent thing for a 12-year-old. He ignored his impatient urge to scramble along the ditch and — willy-nilly — collect whatever random bunches of asparagus he stumbled upon. Instead, he sat down and — for a full five minutes — did absolutely nothing but minutely study one single year-old dried asparagus stalk.

"It looked very much like the dead weeds and plants that surrounded it," Gibbons wrote years later, "and yet there were differences. The old asparagus plant stood about three feet high and had a central stem or 'trunk' about a half inch in diameter which easily distinguished it from weeds with forking stems. The color was different too. Like all the rest of the dead plants it was straw colored, but on the old asparagus the shade was lighter and the color somewhat brighter."

Euell also noticed that a year's weather had completely worn away the gauze-like foliage of the dried asparagus plant. "But the horizontal branches were still there, though badly broken about the outer ends. These side branches, evenly spaced along the old stem, were larger near the ground and tapered to very small near the top, giving the whole plant a . . . very thin, scraggly . . . Christmas tree outline."

Once he had burned the essence of that old asparagus stalk into his memory, Gibbons stood up and looked back along the helter-skelter path he had just foraged. "Instantly," he says, "I saw a dozen dead asparagus stalks I had missed. I went back . . . worked my way down the ditch again, and this time I really reaped a harvest. During the next week we ate fresh asparagus every day!"

Now, roughly a half century after that boyhood experience, Euell Gibbons is still using the same method to teach himself — and others — to forage an increasing variety of wild foods.

"The only rule of thumb I have," he says, "is that you must know a plant is edible before you eat it. A novice simply cannot expect to start out and immediately gather all the wild plants in his area, but it only takes a few minutes for someone to positively identify ONE safe wild plant — say, winter cress — for the neophyte. And if you learn winter cress today, you can then pick all the winter cress you want from now on . . . as easily as you now select a head of cabbage at the supermarket."

So take a tip from Euell Gibbons. If you're new to foraging, don't try to gather every edible wild food in your neighborhood on your first trip afield. Start with one single plant that you can positively identify. Burn it into your memory until you can't possibly mistake it for any other growing thing . . . and then collect that volunteer vegetable to your heart's content.

Euell Gibbons, the internationally known wild foods expert, is an amazing human being. If you'd like to know him better, send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to The Mother Earth News, in care of Times Family Desk, 2621 Douglas. EUELL GIBBONS STALKS THE WILD ASPARAGUS

Author Wendy Bender and friends

NERVOUS AREA CONSUMER WRITES GARDEN BOOK

Eating from your garden 12 months a year is possible right here on the West Coast, says the author of a new book on the subject.

It is a compendium of her knowledge gained from four years of living on the land in the Sooke area, and the published book is evidence that 19th Century printing technique is still successful.

Earth Market is the first in a series of books to be produced on the Benders' 1897 Chandler and Price printing press.

Each book is hand sewn with unbleached linen thread, and a limited edition of 500 numbered and signed copies were produced, all illustrated in color from original linoleum cuts.

"I was nervous being a consumer. I felt uneasy eating fresh vegetables and fruit that were produced for profit rather than for taste or nutrition."

Describing what she does for her garden each month, the author says gardening is a 12 month occupation.

The rewards for constant attention, she says, are good health, new vitality, a love of the earth, and independence.

As Bender asks, can you beat that?

For sale in bookstores for $3.75, the book is also available from the couple's Greentree Press, Box 490, Sooke, B.C.

Right Attitude Long Life Factor

By JERRY R. WILSON

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — If you want to live a long, full life, your attitude will have a lot to do with it.

That's the conclusion of Dr. Leonard Hayflick, professor of medical microbiology at Stanford University's school of medicine and one of the leading researchers on aging in the U.S.

Hayflick said there definitely is a large psychological component involved with aging, and attitude is an important factor in the differing life spans of people of advanced nations.

"There is a whole mythology that goes along with growing old," he said in an interview after participating in a recent forum in Tulsa on aging.

"It is a form of role playing that has in fact made people feel old and lose interest in life and consequently age more rapidly than they would ordinarily if this whole mythology and bias that society puts on the aged did not exist."

People who continue to be active, who retain a zest for life, who are not "put out to pasture" and, possibly, who expect to live long lives because their parents and grandparents did, are likely to remain alert and active well into their 70s and 80s, Hayflick said.

"If these attributes can be encouraged, then we should in theory have all females behaving like Mae West and all males behaving like Maurice Chevalier. We have a lot of people who could be very productive but are turned out to pasture at what, as far as productivity is concerned, is a very early age.

"Society really has to re-evaluate the basic decision that, in the minds of almost all gerontologists was a bad decision, which is forced retirement at a fixed age."

Hayflick said more serious consideration should be given to a two-career approach.

"That is a career they can have up until age 50 or 60, then a second career that they can enjoy after that. By having dual careers, you then don't force on society one of the problems of greater longevity of having people stay in place for an inordinate period of time.

"You might have people at the age of 50 go back to school for another five or eight years and learn how to become whatever second discipline has turned them on in the previous 50 years. This is not a bad idea at all and I think most of us would profit by something like this. It is like coming back again the second time, which might be fun."

Casual, Feminine Styles in Vogue

By MARGARET NESS

MONTREAL (CP) — The return to femininity in women's fashion has created a demand for designer Hugh Garber's clothing. The Montreal designer is known for his classic, casual but ladylike styles, even when pantsuits were in vogue.

"I like to dress ladies in ladylike clothes," said Garber in a recent interview. "White is my favorite color for any season and I like navy too."

Garber admitted he isn't always certain about his designs.

"I hang up the items in each of my collections and look at them for a week before I know if I really like them."

He designs a Hugh Garber label line and another called Grasshopper for Margo Dress of Montreal. Since he started designing for Margo seven years ago, Barber has developed such a substantial United States market that the firm has established a New York office and factory.

The 32-year-old bachelor spends his spare hours refinishing old furniture in the basement workshop at his home in the residential suburb of Notre Dame de Grace in Montreal.

Garber always yearned to be a designer. After completing a two-year course in dress designing at the Hornsey College of Art in London, he attended the Fashion Arts Academy in Montreal.

He was lured by the European fashion houses and after graduation from the Montreal academy he wrote to nine top designers in Italy requesting interviews.

WHILE the Victoria weatherman watched the sky to make his assessment that April came in like a lion, his counterpart in London, Ont., had a more down-to-earth gauge. There, April came in with a lamb, born at the local zoo and held by Tracey Ferrar, and residents are hoping the month's weather will warm up enough for the pastures to turn greener — for themselves and for the lamb.

Neurologists Find Yoga Eases Chronic, Migraine Headaches

By BRIAN DEWHURST

SYDNEY (UPI) — Two Australian neurologists believe 20 mintues a day yoga-type relaxation could be the cure for sufferers of chronic headaches and migraine.

Dr. George Warner and professor John Lance of the Prince Henry and Prince of Wales hospitals in Sydney described their findings in the March issue of the Australian Medical Journal.

Their report is a description of a pilot trial of a simple, rapid method of relaxation based on techniques of classical conditioning in the treatment of patients suffering from chronic migraine and from chronic tension headache.

Their tests involved 25 women, men and children between the ages of 10 to 66 referred for the trial from a neurology clinic.

Some of them suffered frequent migraine attacks, others were subject to chronic tension headaches. Some suffered from both.

Six months later, four were headache-free, four experienced only one headache per month and three had two to four headaches per month — more than 85 per cent reduction in their headache frequency. Seventeen of the 25 patients had reduced or completely dropped their medication.

"Stress appeared to be the major cause of the headaches, even though the stress was no greater than that experienced by normal people," the report says.

Other trigger factors, according to the report, include emotional shock, sustained mental or physical stress, changes in barometric pressure or weather condition, violent physical exercise, certain foods and wines, sleep, and the hormonal changes associated with puberty, menstruation and oral contraceptive pills.

The patients had one 20-minutes session each week with one of the doctors and were told to do the same at home at least once a day.

"The patient lay on the floor and physical comfort was not considered, as the aim was to ensure deep mental relaxation," the doctors say.

Patients were told to relax various muscles in their bodies in turn, repeating the word "relax" in their minds as they did so.

At the beginning of each session the patients were given a description of a relaxing scene.

Mental relaxation predominated in later sessions.

At no time is the patient told to force himself to relax.

"Phrases were used such as "just letting go . . . naturally . . . easily . . . feeling the relaxation gradually setting as a sensation of comfort and heaviness . . ."

"Imagery was used extensively and mental exercises such as dissolving scenes, images and feelings were employed," the report says.

The doctors report that treatment with drugs could be reserved for patients who do not respond adequately to the relaxation treatment or could be used to supplement it.

Deep in Debt, Hopeless Future

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago, I married a kind and gentle man. We were so much in love.

My husband tried to make me understand that we should put the credit cards away to be used only as credit references, but I was stubborn and greedy and wouldn't listen to him.

Now, two years later, we are up to our ears in debt, being hassled by lawyers who represent merchants and loan companies. They are threatening to repossess our car and furniture.

My husband makes $4.50 an hour, but we are so deep in debt and so far behind in payments that our credit is ruined and we can't even get a pack of cigarettes on credit. We owe more than $5,000.

I've called banks, loan companies and savings and loan associations trying to borrow money to pay off our debts, and they all turned us down because of our bad credit rating.

Am I working? No. I have no special skills. Besides I'm black, a woman and weigh 335. I don't mind hard work, but when I apply for a job, they look at me like King Kong just came in.

Please help me, Abby. Things have never looked so hopeless.—Desperate

DEAR DESPERATE: Each payday pay SOMETHING — no matter how little—to each creditor. That will show your good faith, and restore your credit in time. (Consistently ignoring your creditors only damages your credit rating more.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a 38-year-old woman who recently won a six-month cruise around the world. My husband is in prison. In the meantime, I've become interested in another man. My husband is not aware of this other man, and the other man doesn't know that I have a husband.

The other man has asked me if he could join me on the cruise. I would enjoy having his company, but I would feel that I was being unfaithful to my husband.

What do you think?—Troubled

DEAR TROUBLED: I think you're already in deep water. If you want to travel, travel alone.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 54-year-old widower. I had a very good 33-year marriage with my one and only wife. I met a woman a few months ago, and we became very much attracted to each other. She is 44, and we are talking marriage, but there is something in the back of my mind that bothers me.

This woman has been married three times before. She was divorced from her first husband, and her second and third committed suicide. I have a feeling that if she couldn't make a success of three marriages there must be something wrong with her.

What do you think?—Having Doubts

DEAR HAVING: Don't jump to any conclusions. Get to know her better, and judge her for yourself.

DEAR ABBY: Have you ever received a chain letter telling you that if you "break the chain," you will have bad luck? And if you have, what have you done about it?—Just Got One

DEAR JUST: I have received many, and they all end up in the nearest waste basket. Not only are they against the law, they are a lot of superstitious trash. If you feel that you want to "do" something about it, turn it over to the postmaster at your nearest post office, and he will take it from there.

DEAR ABBY: My wife keeps giving me a bad time because in church I use tissues for wiping my nose.

She thinks I should use a handkerchief.

It seems to me that in this modern day and age, tissues should be socially acceptable.

What do you say?—Mac.

DEAR MAC: I'm with you. Tissues are not only more hygienic, but I should think your wife would appreciate your reducing her laundry load a wee bit.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

"Get hold of yourself," we say in exasperation to our long-suffering friends whose complaints seem to us to be more ornery than organic.

But it rarely works for the simple reason that "getting hold of yourself" is not, and has never been, all that easy and simple.

But now, intrigued by the mystics and yogis with whom, in remote temples and ashrams, "self control" is a way of life, scientists with modern instrumentation are verifying that many so-called "involuntary" processes such as headaches and palpitation of the heart, can sometimes be brought under conscious control.

The technique is called "biofeedback." It consists of a signalling device hooked up to the body to give moment-to-moment information about an inner process that is under the control of the nervous system, but which we ordinarily perceive inaccurately or poorly.

Such information, in modern engineering lingo, is "feedback," and since this information concerns biological, or living, processes, it is tagged "biofeedback."

There are biofeedback experiments in which subjects have learned to control an irregular heartbeat, another that made it possible to turn off tension headaches, and a recent dramatic success with a group of patients who learned to control their anal sphincters after having suffered for years from physically-caused, involuntary bowel movements.

Dr. Neal Miller of Rockefeller University has compared the average person trying to learn to control most inner bodily responses to a blindfolded basketball player trying to learn to shoot fouls without the feedback of seeing where the ball is going.

In some cases, he says, appropriate instrumentation can provide feedback that "removes the blindfold" and allows the subject to learn control over bodily functions that are usually beyond his ready perception.

The fact that man can come into touch with his body, and exercise voluntary control over physical functions usually considered to be involuntary, has long been taken for granted in India, the land of yoga. I myself have seen a yogi who could drink a glass of water and half an hour later regurgitate it as crystal clear as when he had swallowed it.

I remember another who could slow his pulse, contract and relax tiny muscles in the palm of his hand and, for special observers, would sit in a pan of water and draw up an enema without benefit of tube or enema-bag.

Many Westerners have watched with amazement the fakirs of India stroll barefoot through a pit of burning coals, without so much as a blister to show for the ordeal.

No longer dismissing such feats as frivolous tricks, contemporary scientists are set on exploring this frontier of the human potentiality for self-help.

Biofeedback training has been tried, of course, to bring down high blood pressure and, to date, it has worked in some cases. The hitch is that pills containing nothing more potent than milk sugar have done the same thing. This should remind us that we must not be gullible.

The business of getting at facts is a slow and rigorous process. And with biofeedback, as with many other scientific ventures, you can't be really sure of what is going on until all the evidence is in. In the meantime, you just have to "get hold of yourself" as best you can.

CIA Blamed For Guru Slip

NEW DELHI — A top official in the Divine Light Mission said Thursday he suspects the United States Central Intelligence Agency had a hand in leading 17-year-old guru Maharaj Ji from his spiritual path. C. L. Tandon, the mission's general secretary in India, said in a statement he suspected that some of Maharaji Ji's leading American devotees had acted on behalf of the CIA to wean the guru from India and his mother.

"It is their intention to use guru Maharaji Ji's influence for political and financial gains," the statement added.

BEND, Ore. — Because of a burglar had a heart, Ownbey's Jewelry store will stay in business.

Bruce and Carol Ownbey were about to go out of business after a burglary Feb. 7 in which they lost $8,500 of uninsured gold and silver jewelery. The Ownbeys revealed Thursday they had been contacted last weekend by a "sorrowful young man" who wanted to return $7,100 worth of the stolen jewelery. Mrs. Ownbey said he also promised to pay $1,400 for jewelery already sold, and to pay for damage done during the break-in.

SASKATOON — Rosemary Brown of Vancouver, a candidate for the national New Democrataic Party leadership said Thursday she favors a return to the fundamental socialism set out in the Regina Manifesto of 1933. She said she is receiving favorable reaction to her commitment to pre-NDP socialist philosophy.

RUPERT, Idaho — A man who admitted he kept his mother chained for four months to her bed because she was unmanageable was indicted Thursday on manslaughter charges as a result of her strangulation. A coroner's jury indicted Ernest Ruffner, 34, and his wife, Grisalla, for the death of Anna Ruffner, 77, whose body was found Monday. Ruffner told the jury that his mother had remained chained to her bed from December 1974 until her death.

DENVER — Police said Thursday they believed a 19-year-old transient smoked marijuana in front of them to get free room and board and not to test local drug laws.

Narcotics detective Tom Laska said he arrested Danny O'Connor after the youth sat smoking a pipe filled with marijuana in the lobby of police headquarters. Laska said he asked what was in the pipe and O'Connor said, "marijuana."

Laska speculated O'Connor had been unsuccessful in finding a place to bed down for the night and was seeking food and shelter.

THE TWO FACES OF PATTY

WASHINGTON — The FBI is circulating a new photograph (right) of fugitive heiress Patricia Hearst, one retouched to show her with cut and bleached hair — the way they believe she now looks.

'Magic' Secret From the Grave

Houdini

LONDON — A United States psychologist published Thursday what he said was the secret to how magician Harry Houdini performed his most famous trick of escaping, handcuffed, from a locked trunk, thrown underwater.

The feat so mystified the public at the time that Houdini was hailed by some as a spiritualist medium.

Houdini was said to have taken the secret of how he did the trick to the grave when he died 50 years ago.

But psychologist Robert Ornstein wrote in Thursday's issue of The New Scientist magazine that Houdini did the seemingly impossible by learning "automatic control" — the knack of regulating the body's involuntary functions, like heartbeats and digestion.

Houdini used to swallow the key which unlocked the handcuffs and the trunk before the performance and, having developed control of his digestive system, regurgitated the key inside the box and opened the locks, Ornstein said.

DEFECTOR TO DANCE

TORONTO — The National Ballet of Canada announced Thursday that Mikhail Baryshnikov, who defected from the Soviet Union last year, will appear as guest artist during the troupe's performances at Montreal's Place des Arts Sept. 26-28.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many friends, relatives and all others for their help and kindness shown at the loss of a dear husband and father, Dennis Gardner. Deep appreciation to all for the lovely flowers, cards, kind words and donations. Special thanks to Rev. Hugh M. Hunter for his comforting words to me and the children at home and his very kind message at the funeral and graveside. A very special thanks to Don and Linda McKay, Ray and Sherry Craig, George Erkery and close friends who were with me at my time of greatest need. Also my deepest gratitude to the pallbearers and Sands Memorial Chapel. Karen, David, Sherri and Jamie Gardner.

9 IN MEMORIAM

FRANCE—In loving memory of dear brother John who fell asleep March 28, 1971 Mother 1952, Dad 1943 and brother Herbert 1938.
"But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him." 1 Thessalonians 4:13, 14.
—Ever remembered by sisters and brother, nieces and nephews.

HAWKINS — In loving memory of dearest Mom and Nana who journeyed away one year ago.
We do not need a special day,
To bring you to our mind,
The days we do not think of you
Are so very hard to find.
—Sadly missed by Joan, Hazel and families.

WHITTAKER — In loving memory of our dear Mother, Mary Josephine, who passed away March 25, 1973 in Victoria.
In our hearts she is fondly remembered
Sweet memories cling to her name,
Those who loved her in life sincerely,
Still love her in death just the same.
—Ever remembered by Connie and Cliff, Joan and George.

WHITTAKER — In loving memory of our Grandmother, Mary Josephine, who passed away March 25, 1973 in Victoria.
Nothing can ever take away,
Loving memories we hold deep in our hearts.
—Always remembered by her grandchildren.

THE JOB:
The Saskatchewan Research Council, a Crown agency charged with undertaking applied research in the natural sciences, is establishing a corporate entity to carry out environmental impact studies according to guidelines specified by the Saskatchewan Department of Environment. The new entity will, on a competitive basis, seek contracts from both the public and private sectors. A senior manager is required for this activity.
THE PERSON:
The successful applicant will likely have a strong background in one or more of the environmental sciences, be currently employed in that area, and should have a broad interest in the social and economic aspects of development. It will be essential to have an ability both to deal directly with senior management in government and industry on administrative and scientific aspects and also to work with professional staff since coordination of in-house staff and the recruitment and contracting of extramural staff for special assignments will be a major job element.
APPLICATION:
Applications will be received until May 15, 1975. Initially, the successful applicant will receive a two-year contract for services. There is a high expectation that a permanent appointment will be made after the initial contract period. Salaries from $20,000 annum up are available, depending on qualifications.
Please send a complete resume, including the names of three referees, and data available to:
Dr. T. P. Pepper
Director
Saskatchewan Research Council
90 Campus Drive
Saskatoon, Sask. S7N 0X1
Attention: E.A.M.

A Book for Balcony Gardeners

Gardening off the Ground by Art C. Drysdale, published by J. M. Dent & Sons Ltd., Don Mills, Ontario, price $3.95.

Just off the press this spring, a 100-page soft cover book by a Toronto high-rise gardener who is also associate director of the Civic Garden Centre of Metropolitan Toronto is the first on a national scale to be written wholly for balcony gardeners.

We have local groups of apartment and balcony gardeners to whom this little book will bring what appears to be first-hand information on overcoming some of the problems peculiar to off the ground gardens.

No longer is it only a matter of putting out a couple of potted gift plants, but the designing of a miniature garden capable of living and being enjoyed in the artificial surroundings of a cliff-hanging balcony.

Self-watering devices are well illustrated and explained in the text of this little book; the feasibility of lining plant containers to reduce water loss in summer and the special care needed by these lined containers in winter; protecting the root area of plants in containers from penetrating frost and heat; light weight soil mixtures; need for occasional fertilizer; all these subjects are touched on helpfully.

The choice of plants — shrubs, trees, climbers, perennials, annuals and bulbs — for sun and shade, their pruning to maintain size, and their general care in planting and subsequent years, is all concisely dealt with. Included too is the starting of plants from seeds and cuttings under fluorescent lights.

Vegetables, fruits, fruit trees and herbs have 15 pages, illustrated with drawings, showing various means of obtaining worthwhile small quantities of truly fresh foods. Here in our coastal climate, we are able to have something green from a balcony garden all year round when we escape an exceptionally long cold winter spell. While we frequently register well below zero degrees celsius, the spell is seldom of long duration.

Caution must be used when it comes to disease and pest controls, especially in the same area as edible portions of plants, such as Sweet Violet leaves, herbs, scented geranium leaves.

The malation and systemic insecticides recommended by Drysdale, the author of Gardening off the Ground, should not be used near dwelling places where fumes can accumulate. Nor should toxic spraying be done without the approved mask and clothing. Systemics cannot be used near any plants or foliage that will be eaten because the poison is diffused through all parts of the plants by means of the water in the soil. The balcony gardener is obligated not to poison his neighbor's food or fill adjoining apartments with harmful fumes.

A final suggestion for local use: check with the building management or the landlord for necessary written assent before committing yourself to plans more ambitious than a couple of flower pots.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is my belief that the major deficiency in the make-up of the average player is his inability to resist the urge to win a trick at the first opportunity that presents itself. This shortcoming is responsible for the loss of many contracts that should have been fulfilled. As a case in point, observe today's deal, which arose in a rubber-bridge game. Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♥ A Q 10
♣ 7 5 2

WEST
♠ Q 9 5
♥ 7 3 2
♦ 7 6
♣ A 10 8 6 3

EAST
♠ 7 6 2
♥ 9 8 6 4
♦ K 8 5 3
♣ Q 4

SOUTH
♠ K 8 4 3
♥ K J 5
♣ K J 9

The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♦ | Pass | 2 NT | Pass |
| 3 NT | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Opening lead: Six of ♣.

East put up the club queen on West's opening lead, and South captured the trick with his king. The ten of diamonds was led next, and the finesse taken against West's hoped-for king. But East won the trick, and returned his remaining club. Declarer's J-9 was now trapped by West's A-10. When play had ended, the defenders had made four club tricks and one diamond.

Declarer did not play the hand well. If it were his intention to finesse against West for the diamond king (rather than for the spade queen against East), there wasn't a thing he could do about preventing East from winning a trick with the diamond king. But what he could have tried to do was to prevent East from returning a club if the latter possessed the king of diamonds.

When East put up the club queen on the opening lead, declarer should have allowed the queen to win. The four of clubs would have been played back, South would have put up his jack—and he would have had a fulfilled contract. When declarer subsequently took the diamond finesse, losing to East's king, East would have no club to play back. And whatever else he returned, declarer would have had no problem in handling.

By allowing East to win the opening lead, declarer would be guaranteeing his contract if the adversely-held clubs were divided 5-2, with the leader having five. And if they were divided 4-3, then no matter what South played from his hand at trick one, the defenders would be able to win only three club tricks and one diamond. Thus the recommended play of deferring the winning of a club trick was "on the house": it could never be a losing play.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Saturday, April 5

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis rests on exciting chances, romantic interests, creative endeavors. Some of your fondest hopes, wishes may be fulfilled. Gemini, Virgo persons figure prominenty. Member of opposite sex could fall madly in love — with you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get entrenched, position is solidified. Your desires, goals are illuminated. Home, family affairs are accented. There is room for you at more elevated position. Know it and exude confidence. Co-operate in special civic project.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Favorable Moon aspect coincides now with travel, long-distance communications, educations, a refining and redefining of philosophy. Heed inner voice. See as is, not merely through fantasy prisms. What seems finer, greener elsewhere may actually be second-rate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Question of "how much" could dominate. Includes manpower and money — dig deep for answers. Reject fairy tales, superficialities. Mate, close associate, legal partner has plenty to do and say about current money situation. Accept responsibility. If single, there is talk of marriage.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Hold off on new projects. There are personal, legal matters which require clarification. Aries, Libra could be involved. Play waiting game. If you don't know what to do, do nothing. Red tape tangle is temporary. Process of "unwinding" is upcoming.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New contacts aid in bringing about special or unique services. You also receive genuine health information. You get new ease and proverbial second chance. Leo, Aquarius individuals could figure in prominent ways.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with creative urges, young persons, romance, exciting changes. You can climb above the petty — intuition can provide genuine insights. Aquarius plays key role and Virgo also is in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Sense of fitness, humor — and ability to keep diet resolutions — are more important than usual. Flexibility is a necessity, too. Persons, long out of touch, make reappearances. Calls, messages appear to multiply.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You find that ability to put ideas into action is enhanced. Means what had been procrastination becomes viable. Know it and refuse to sell yourself short. One who points out apparent minor detail deserves your close attention.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar position highlights money, collections, payments, ability to analyze and consolidate. Gemini, Virgo persons are in picture. Be selective. Choose quality — and count your change. Someone appears to want something for nothing — and you could be a prime target.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is high; take initiative. Start something. Imprint personality. Make new forays in new directions. Highlight creativity. Your personality shines; you could sell anything. Speak up — be frank, direct.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Aura of glamor is emphasized. Sweet mystery dominates. Some of your best qualities surge forward — to your benefit. Be discreet. Tell only as much as necessary. You're making great impression on one in position to "pull strings."

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you love change, challenge and you have been "spoiled" by the opposite sex. You are attractive, sensitive, and in October you could strike pay dirt. Gemini, Virgo persons play key roles in your life. April and October are your most important months of 1975. You are not every person's cup of tea but, to others, you are indispensable.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Len looked at the piece of paper. "Divide that 5-figure number by 19 in my head?" he asked. "Come on Pete! Could you?"

"It's easy, Dad." The boy grinned. "Just jdrop the middle digit, and then put the first pair of digits last and hte last pair first."

As simple as that! What was the number?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: HEALER was 103507.

Normal Immigration Rules Waived for 17,443 in '74

OTTAWA (CP) — An immigration department spokesman said Thursday that normal immigration procedures were waived last year for 17,443 persons because of "humanitarian considerations."

The spokesman said that 85 per cent of the special permits issued by Immigration Minister Robert Andras went to next-of-kin or dependents of Canadian citizens or landed immigrants.

"There is nothing sinister or mysterious about it," he said. "It was felt that it was a humanitarian program in favor of reunification of families."

The Immigration Act was changed in 1972 to prevent persons from applying for landed immigrant status from within the country. However, the rules have been bent in thousands of cases since then.

Most ministerial permits issued last year allowed next-of-kin or dependents of Canadian citizens and landed immigrants to apply for landed immigrant status from within the country, he said.

The spokesman said that 4,392 special permits were issued in 1973 in addition to a special two-month period of relaxed regulations which allowed more than 20,000 illegal immigrants to obtain landed immigrant status. There also was a heavy flow of ministerial permits being issued this year.

"This is what has been going on since 1972," the spokesman said. "It is common knowledge."

Andras has promised a new immigration act later this year. A "green paper" outlining policy alternatives, released two months ago by the minister, was designed as a base for wide-ranging public debate on immigration.

The department spokesman said Thursday that if the public objects to the minister's power to issue special permits "now is the time to speak."

The spokesman said that special permission to apply for landed immigrant status from within the country is granted only to sponsored relatives "who would make it just the same" under regular procedures.

"It saves them a lot of problems and it is mainly based on a policy of reunification of the family."

Special permits also are granted to refugees, short-term visitors who normally would not be allowed in and disabled persons who do not qualify for landed immigrant status under the existing act. Retarded persons and epileptics cannot now apply for landed immigrant status without special permission.

"Last Christmas a man who had been deported wanted to visit his wife in Vancouver and he got a permit," the spokesman said.

QUE. PENSION PLAN FACES EXHAUSTION

QUEBEC (CP) — The reserves of the Quebec Pension Plan (QPP) will be exhausted by 1994, says a report recently tabled in the Quebec national assembly.

The report, prepared by the Quebec Deposit and Investment Fund, the QPP's investment arm, warned that by 1990 it might be forced to liquidate its assets to pay QPP benefits unless the provincial government takes action.

Such a liquidation would mean the abandonment of the fund's significant investment role in the development of Quebec, said Marcel Cazavan, chairman and general manager of the deposit and investment fund.

The report notes that in recent years the QPP's reserves have been dwindling because of a decline in pension plan deposits to the fund. The value of deposits dropped from $253.5 million in 1972 to $244.3 million and $241.2 million in 1973 and 1974 respectively because of increased benefits being paid.

Each year the number of pension plan claimants grows and the value of benefits paid to new claimants increases.

The recent warning to the provincial government that QPP legislaeion must be changed was not the first. Similar gloomy predictions resulted from a 1970 study, which forecast depletion of the pension fund reserves by 2007.

Results of yet another more comprehensive five-year study of the pension plan will be released in a few months, Cazavan said.

The health of the deposit and investment fund and its $3.6 billion in assets is crucially tied to that of the QPP because 95.7 per cent of the fund's long-term deposits and 92.9 per cent of the total deposits last Dec. 31 came from the Quebec Pension Board.

Unless there are amendments to the Quebec Pension Plan, thus stalling removal of the fund's investment dollars from Quebec's economy, the province's total investment picture could undergo adverse changes, Cazavan said.

Most of the fund's assets are invested within Quebec. Liquidation of these assets poses serious implications for sectors of the Quebec economy, such as real estate, stocks and bonds, where the fund has invested heavily.

Cazavan described the fund as "the largest individual portfolio of Canadian equities in the country" and the largest holder of bonds issued in Canadian funds by the Quebec government and Hydro-Quebec, the government-owned power utility.

FISH QUOTAS SOUGHT

TOKYO (AP) — The Soviet Union has proposed tough restrictions for 1975 against Japanese fishing, including salmon and herring catch quotas, in the North Pacific and adjacent areas, Japanese government sources said.

The sources said the proposal — aside from dropping the ceiling on the number of Japanese fishing boats operating simultaneously in the area known as the B zone, south of the 45th parallel — called for expanded areas banning or suspending fishery operations.

Sources said 1973 was a bumper year when the Japanese quota was set at 91,000 tons.

Hydrogen Looks Good As Fuel Substitute

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States postal service said Wednesday that tests on a hydrogen gas-powered mail truck show the non-petroleum fuel has "the potential of averting future energy shortages."

Though now quite costly to process, hydrogen gas offers two tremendous advantages as a motor vehicle fuel, the official announcement noted.

First, it's as plentiful as water and, second, it produces far less pollution.

Using a regular American Motors six-cylinder, water-cooled engine with a modified carburetor and other special equipment, the postal service's experimental quarter-ton truck got about nine miles per gallon of liquid hydrogen when driven at normal speeds, officials said.

Liquid hydrogen now costs about $1.80 per gallon, or $90 to fill the truck's 50-gallon tank. But postal officials said greater production and use could lower the cost considerably.

A large, spherical aluminum tank, located in the cargo area right behind the driver's seat, holds the liquid hydrogen at a temperature of minus 430 degrees fahrenheit. As the engine turns, the liquid is fed through a vaporizer to convert it to gas, then mixed with air as it enters the combustion chambers. Water is then injected into the mixture, a process which helps eliminate emissions of carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons and nitrogen oxide.

The postal service said the engine runs much cooler with the hydrogen fuel, making it ideal for use in air-cooled engines, as well as water-cooled. Overheating has long been a problem associated with air-cooled engines that burn regular fuel.

The postal service said it would not expand the experiment until a way is found to reduce the cost of liquid hydrogen.

Eagles From Dinosaurs?

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Eagles and turkeys may be descendants of dinosaurs, according to a pair of scientists who feel the beasts never really became extinct.

An article in this month's Scientific American outlines the dinosaurs-into-birds theory of Robert T. Bakker, of Harvard's society of Fellows, and John H. Ostrom of Yale.

They say the big dinosaurs died out because they were "hit by an environmental zap" of changing conditions. But while the tyrannosaurus rex bit the prehistoric dust 65 million years ago, a lot of the little dinosaurs and mammals lived on, evolving over the centuries into today's birds.

120 DIE IN FIERY CRASH

Babylift Begins in Disaster

Times News Services

SAIGON — A great U.S. Galaxy transport plane carrying the first orphans out of South Vietnam under President Ford's Operation Babylift, crashed today near the Saigon airport, killing nearly half of the 294 persons aboard, most of them babies.

The plane was carrying 243 orphans ranging in age from eight months to 12 years, many of them fathered by U.S. servicemen who had served in Vietnam. Official said about 100 orphans survived and that between 120 and 150 were killed.

Also aboard were 43 escorts from the U.S. mission in Saigon and eight air force crewmen.

It appeared that the crewmen and many of the escorts survived.

The plane was 40 to 60 miles out of Saigon after takeoff when a rear cargo door blew out. This damaged the Galaxy's elevators as the plane flew at 31,000 feet.

The pilot, Maj. Dennis Traynor, turned back toward Tan Son Nyhut airbase but was unable to control the rate of descent and plunged to earth in a swampy area just outside the base. Ruptured fuel tanks burst into flames, sending up towers of smoke that could be seen in Saigon, six or seven miles away.

U.S. officials in Washington said they were dismayed by news of the crash but there were no plans to discontinue the flights.

It was the second incident of the day involving orphan flights. A Pan American world airways plane with 34 orphans aboard was grounded today in Guam by mechanical difficulties.

Military sources said the area of the crash site was 50 per cent controlled by the Viet Cong and there had been fighting in the area only Thursday night. Troops were rushed to the scene to secure the area as helicopters ferried out the dead and living.

"I saw 20 to 30 babies who survived carried out," said Dr. William Oldham, an American who is chief medical adviser to the government of Soth Vietnam.

"All those who survived must have been on the upper passenger deck. All those below in cargo section must have been killed."

"Many of those babies survived the crash beautifully," he said.

"I carried in one handicapped boy who still had his crutch and brace and all he said was he wanted to go potty."

A spokesman for the department of external affairs in Ottawa said 34 of the orphans had been destined for adoption in Canada.

The spokesman said "34 of those children were destined for Canadian families, and we have no information at all if some of these survived or if all were killed."

The controversial swept-wing Galaxy, the world's largest jet plane, had been delayed by mechanical problems on its departure earlier today from Clark Air Force Base in the Philippines. It was to have flown back to Clark for 48 hours of medical treatment of the orphans before flying on to Travis AFB, Calif. where Ford personally had planned to meet it.

The two-decker plane may have been carrying more passengers than ever had been attempted.

. . . Tiny Fingers Frozen In Death

Times News Services

SAIGON — Tiny fingers clutched in death a woman's breast. The lifeless arms of the woman still gripped the corpse of the baby she evidently had tried to protect . . .

Headless bodies were buried in the mud. . . .

This was the crash site of the United States Air Force C-5A Galaxy transport that was to have carried 243 Vietnamese orphans to the United States today.

Flames still leapt from sections of the giant transport which two hours earlier had crashed with a thunderous roar.

Rescuers slogged through knee-deep mud and waist-high grass in search of survivors.

It was a tragedy of stunning proportions even in a nation that has seen more than its share of them in 30 years of war.

"I just can't talk," said one American woman who survived.

The sudden whoosh of air out of the cabin of the plane, the largest in the world, was the first sign of the imminent tragedy.

Air Force Sgt. Jim Hadley, a Sacramento, Calif., medical technician finishing two weeks of reserve training with a weekend flight to Saigon, knew right away the plane was in a decompression condition.

"You could see the hole in the back of the plane, you could see the sunlight streaming in.

"Things started flying around. Eyeglasses. Pens. Pieces of insulation tore off the ceiling. The pillows exploded. They were plastic lined.

"That went on for a little while until the air stopped. By then the oxygen masks had dropped down.

"There weren't enough oxygen masks. We had to keep moving them from kid to kid. We kept on our own because otherwise you get drowsy and then you go out."

★ Thieu Won't Quit

SAIGON (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu said today the South Vietnamese cabinet has resigned and a new government is being formed.

The change of government came after the Saigon regime claimed to have cracked the second plot in a week for a coup against Thieu.

There were increasing signs that Thieu, with U.S. backing, intended to fight all attempts to force him out of office.

U.S. Army Chief of Staff Gen. Frederick C. Weyand said he agrees fully with Thieu's military efforts despite massive setbacks to the South Vietnamese armed forces.

Weyand visited Nha Trang, 188 miles northeast of Saigon, last Saturday and said then: "I'm heartened by the performance of (South Vietnamese army) troops. The situation here appears stabilized. They're not demoralized in any sense of the word. We're in sort of a breather."

Two days later Nha Trang fell to the Communists. Civilians and soldiers fled the city and two other provincial capitals, giving them up without a fight.

Weyand, President Ford's personal envoy in South Vietnam for the past week, said that "The North Vietnamese army . . . can be defeated."

He told newsmen the Saigon government's abandonment

Bridge Pickets Ready to Talk

Striking civic employees today said they are willing to co-operate to avoid industrial layoffs or a Labor Relations Board order arising from closure of Johnson Street bridge lift span.

The possibility of production shutdown at B.C. Forest Products Ltd. sawmill and curtailment of plywood runs at its adjoining mill on Selkirk Water was raised this morning by BCFP manager Walter Nelson, who said an order may be sought to curtail picketing of the bridge.

Jim Walker, president of Local 50 Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the union may meet with BCFP, Smith Cedar Products and Butler-Lafarge to discuss the bridge closure.

"We can co-operate with reasonable people," Walker said.

Nelson said the company has chip scows waiting to be towed out of the harbor and some 20 railway cars of lumber and plywood ready for rail barge transport by way of Canadian National Railways Pt. Ellice ferry dock.

Shipping in the upper harbor is trapped by the lift span which pickets refuse to leave to allow operation of the span.

Inflation Mechanism Unchanging

By WILLIAM REES-MOGG, Times of London editor

The circumstances which predispose a society to inflation are of a varied and complex kind. There is therefore room for many views about the ultimate causes of inflation, and these views may all have some truth in them. They remain very confusing to the public, which feels that inflation is an abstract subject on which the economists themselves disagree. There is still more disagreement among politicians, some of whom have no proper understanding of the subject, all of whom are subject to political pressures, often to do the wrong thing.

I am convinced, have become convinced, that there is a single mechanism of inflation, which can be isolated and described. I do not take the view that this mechanism, which is a monetary one, operates in a vacuum. It is subject to external, non-monetary influences in its inception and at every stage of its progression. Nevertheless, there is one difference between the mechanism and the influences from outside. The mechanism is always the same. A monetary account of any inflation always shows the same pattern of operation. The outside factors are often quite different.

One can see this both historically and geographically. In the French inflation of the 1790s the prime non-monetary force was the French Revolution and the hazards that it faced; in the German inflation of 1921 to 1923 the prime non-monetary force was the reparations question and the French occupation of the Ruhr; in the German inflation after 1945 the prime non-monetary force was defeat; in the current British inflation it is trade union power. In all these inflations the basic monetary pattern has been the same.

Currently one can make the same point geographically: Japan, Italy, France, Britain and the United States are all suffering severe inflation. The non-monetary factors, mainly trade union power and oil price movements (in so far as those are regarded as political and monopolistic) differ very much from country to country. The temptation to blame oil prices is probably at its highest in Japan.

This distinction between an unchanging mechanism of inflation and changing political forces seems to me to be crucial. If one can master the mechanism then one can master inflation; yet if the mechanism is brought into operation by political forces, one will only be allowed to master the mechanism if one can also master or bring under persuasion the political forces.

If this view is correct it follows first of all that any non-monetary approach will fail. For instance, the recent Conservative attempt in Britain to combine inflationary monetary policies with control of inflation by non-monetary means was bound to be self-defeating. Yet at the same time the simplistic monetary view that it is possible by monetary means alone to control inflation is erroneous. Governments inflate because they feel that they have no political alternative but to inflate. They may or may not understand the dangers of inflating, but they act as they do in response to political forces. Those forces cannot simply be disregarded. Apart from anything else, in a democracy those forces may express themselves in an election victory for another party.

My views of the causes of inflation are not original; they belong indeed to the broad tradition of monetary economics. Nevertheless they represent a view of the character in inflation which is not universally accepted.

Court Restricts Book Salesmen

A temporary injunction against specific door-to-door sales practices of an encyclopedia company has been issued by the B.C. Supreme Court.

It marks the first time in Canada a government has joined with a consumer association to seek and obtain a court order stopping a certain type of business practice.

The provincial department of consumer services announced today the specific terms of the temporary injunction against P. F. Collier and Son Ltd, following the March 26 decision of the Supreme Court in Kelowna.

The action against the company, publishers of Colliers' Encyclopedia, was launched by the Kelowna branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada with the support of B.C.'s director of trade practices.

The court ruled that prima facie proof had been established that Colliers' sales presentation was capable of deceiving consumers and therefore violated the B.C. Trade Practices Act.

Several deceptive practices were alleged in the action and the court granted the temporary injunction against two specific practices employed by Colliers.

Those practices, according to the consumer services department announcement, involved the failure of salesmen to disclose immediately that the purpose of their door-to-door calls was for the sales of an encyclopedia. Customers were apparently led to believe the purpose was for something else.

Also it was charged the salesmen did not give enough emphasis to the full and complete price of their sales items, quoting instead a cost per day price.

$20M FREE LOAN GRANTED TO BCR

B.C. Railway has been granted a $20 million interest-free loan from the provincial government.

Premier Barrett said Thursday a cabinet order, passed during the day, gives the railway money to cover financial requirements until new legislation extending BCR's borrowing power is approved by the legislature.

That bill, now before the house, would expand BCR's borrowing capacity from $440 million to $650 million.

But the legislation may not be passed for several weeks and Barrett said the money is needed immediately.

Those funds, plus another $15 million granted the railway in January to cover operating losses incurred by the seven-week rail strike last year, must be paid back to the government as soon as the legislation is passed and it can borrow the money through regular channels.

Barrett has promised the legislature a full report and financial statement on the railway later this session.

Costs May Force B.C. Tel Layoff

B.C. Tel will lay off some staff in all major centres in the province, including Victoria, starting May 15, a company spokesman said today.

The layoffs will affect those in the lowest seniority categories.

Ken Horodyski, spokesman for B.C. Tel in Victoria, said the layoffs were necessary because of increasing costs.

A conciliation officer's report awarding B.C. Tel's 14,000 employees an 18 per cent pay increase this year and 14 per cent in 1976 would add $2.8 million to the labor bill in this year alone, Horodyski said.

The report is being studied by the company. Part of the report has been accepted by B.C. Tel but the pay award has not been dealt with by the company.

The employees, members of the B.C. Federation of Telephone Workers, are currently voting on whether to accept the report.

Snowstorm Rampages East to Halifax

Times News Services

Southeastern Canada today dug out from an April blizzard which paralyzed air and ground traffic and was blamed for at least five highway deaths.

The weather bureau said the spring snowstorm, which Thursday lashed southern Ontario and Quebec with winds up to 50 miles an hour, dumped the winter's highest accumulation of snow over the region. Eighteen inches of snow fell in some areas of Ontario and Montreal was showered with 11.3 inches.

In Halifax, tugs were standing by the gypsum-carrier Colin Brown early today after the vessel went aground in the harbor approaches during the violent storm.

Elsewhere in the Maritimes, Saint John, N.B., reported one inch of snow as the storm reached New Brunswick where between five and 10 inches are expected before the disturbance passes.

Winds gusting to 40 m.p.h. accompanied the storm and police said roads in the Woodstock and Florenceville areas of northern New Brunswick were almost impassable.

"If you din't have it tied down," said a New Jersey policeman. "You didn't have it this morning."

Toronto Gold Shares Plunge

All other sectors also moved lower in light mid-afternoon trading.

Volume to 2 p.m. was 1.23 million shares, down from 2.41 million traded at the same time Thursday.

Sidney Boat Dwellers Get Orders to Leave

People living on boats at Fishermen's Wharf in Sidney have been told to get out immediately because they are contributing to unsanitary conditions around the dock, Sidney municipal clerk Geoff Logan said today.

There are about six vessels being used as homes at the federal dock just off Resthaven Drive and their owners will have to find other docking facilities because of the Sidney order.

Logan said an order will be distributed today prohibiting use of the dock as a permanent moorage area.

The people living at the wharf are apparently contravening both federal and municipal regulations, Logan said. Although the dock is a federal facility, Sidney is responsible for its administration.

Sidney RCMP members and some members of the Sidney municpal staff went to the wharf earlier this week and informed the residents they would have to leave.

Some have apparently indicated they do not intend to leave.

Logan said the order would definitely be enforced and that it takes affect immediately "although if they're out next week that would probably be all right."

He said the municipality could "make arrangements to have them moved" if the residents are not out in time. "If they want to make a court case out of it, then they can."

A federal regulation prohibits anyone at the dock from dumping garbage or waste into the water and Logan says the people at Fisherman's Wharf are doing that. "We know they are because there is no other dumping facility."

The federal dock lease also states that Sidney is responsible for insuring there is no nuisance or disturbances around the dock "and the unsanitary conditions contribute to the nuisance," Logan said.

A Sidney bylaw makes it necessary for a boat to have a holding tank for sewage waste and to be hooked to a sewage facility, another thing the Fisherman's Wharf residents don't have, Logan said.

The bylaw requiring sewage hookup is enforced in other marinas in the municipality, Logan said "so we have to do it here."

Sidney Ald. Wilkie Gardner said today the wharf was built specifically for fishermen who have first moorage rights in the winter, but when the fishing fleet is out in the summer the wharf is used for tourist docking.

Gardener said he understood there were some families with small children living in the boats.

Hospital Report Under Wraps

The chairman of the Regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission said today that a consultant's report recommending roles for district hospitals will not be made public.

Robert Wallace declined to specify why the 76-page report which the commission received last month from Agnew Peckham and Associates Ltd. won't be released but he said the commission believes "no useful purpose would be served" by making it public.

At the same time, he said decisions on what roles area hospitals will be assigned by the commission stemming from the consultant's report "will certainly be public information."

The commission will likely make a public report on the matter at its next meeting April 16, he said.

At its inaugural meeting Dec. 18, the commission, which has authority to plan, build, move or discontinue hospital facilities throughout the Capital district, decided it would hold open meetings while reserving the right to deal with some business behind closed doors.

The last two meetings of the commission have been held in secret while the report on hospital roles, prepared by consultant Ronald McQueen was considered. The report was given to the commission's two standing advisory committees, one a group of senior hospital administrators and the other a group of doctors, for study and comment.

The roles study by McQueen is one of a number he will be preparing. Agnew Peckham also has the job of preparing a master plan for hospital development in the Capital district and Wallace said today that as master planning is unfolding "the public will know all about it."

Aberdeen Purchase Backed

The regional hospital board and the provincial government appear to have reached agreement on cost-sharing in the purchase of Aberdeen private hospital.

The provincial government bought the private hospital on Hillside last month for $1.1 million but the regional hospital board, which is expected to provide 40 per cent of the purchase price, balked last week at rubber-stamping approval until it could be assured it would not face substantial additional costs bringing the hospital up to provincial standards.

Board chairman Art Young said today the board's executive met with the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service Thursday and will recommend to the board at its meeting next week regional approval of the purchase.

A survey of the hospital shows spending of about $25,000 would be needed to meet provincial standards, and the region has been told there is a good chance the province will agree to sharing this on the more favorable 60-40 formula, Young said.

Gov't Faces Scramble To Prepare Marguerite

The provincial government will have to scramble to get the Princess Marguerite ready to sail in six weeks.

The province bought the 27-year-old ship for what it considers a bargain price of $275,000 but the vessel is in some disrepair and a major overhaul is planned for next winter.

In the meantime, the government must find a general manager, hire a crew, plan the operation and carry out a superficial spring cleaning.

Resources Minister Bob Williams — the man who will be in charge of the independent ferry operation between Victoria and Seattle — got his first glimpse of the vessel Thursday.

It's in better shape than Williams said he expected and he hopes the ship can be extensively refurbished to bring back the grand old days of the steamship era.

"An interior designer could have a field day here," he said as he toured the cold, damp, tired interior of the ship.

Williams envisions sprucing up the bar area on the top deck with carpets and new curtains, softer chairs and sitting areas and general redecoration in old Victorian fashion.

The old dining room and ballroom areas could be returned to their former state and the long narrow glassed-in promenades refurbished by bringing up the teak decks and restoring the benches and deck chairs.

Music and other entertainment will likely be brought aboard and the dining and bar facilities upgraded.

The ship has been idle since last fall when Canadian Pacific decided the $100,000-a-year average operating losses were too much to bear.

Usually, the vessel only undergoes a six-week spring refit and this year will be no different, but the government has decided it needs much more than a cleaning and paint job.

Next winter's restoration project could run into hundreds of thousands of dollars but no official price tag has been put on the work.

Williams is convinced the government made a good deal in buying the ship for $275,000 within a total package of $2.475 million with 8.7 acres of waterfront property.

It was valued by CP at $250,000 for scrap and between $450,000 to $1 million as an operating ship. Replacement value today would run into the millions of dollars, said Williams.

The ship has room for 2,000 passengers and space on the lower two decks for up to 90 cars.

Besides restoring the daily run from Seattle to Victoria and back during the summer months, the government is considering a number of alternatives for operating the ship during the winter.

NDP Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst, who will head a citizen's advisory committee to make recommendations on the operation of the service, has suggested the ferry might run to the Lower Mainland during the winter.

The Seattle-Victoria service will be kept separate from the regular B.C. Ferry fleet and government officials indicate close tabs will be kept on its financial status. If it continues to lose a great deal of money, fares on the vessel will have to be raised.

ESSO RAISES FUEL PRICES

Imperial Oil has raised its wholesale prices for gasoline and furnace oil by 2 cents a gallon, in line with new provincial guidelines.

Ask The Times

Q. I've heard a lot of stories about a woman ghost, supposed to haunt Uplands golf course. Is she the woman who was grossly murdered years ago? Has anyone ever seen her and when in the year does she appear? B.J.E.

A. We've heard a few stories too. This lady ghost is supposed to haunt the eighth hole of the Victoria golf course on Beach Drive where she has appeared (to some people) infrequently as an opaque misty image. One story has it she's the ghost of a woman whose murdered body was found there in the fall of 1936. The body of her husband, who had a drinking problem, was found drowned near the same area.

Six-Year Term For Attacks

Roger Allan Lonsdale was sentenced in county court today to six years in the penitentiary for two counts of indecent assault and one of intercourse with a person under 14.

Lonsdale, 23, of 651 Dupplin, had pleaded guilty Feb. 17 to the charges and was held in custody pending sentence today by Judge E. J. C. Stewart.

First charge of indecent assault related to an incident Dec. 7 when he picked up two 17-year-old hitch-hikers and put a knife to the neck of one of them.

Lonsdale pulled a knife, and ordered her to lift her skirt. She objected, got out and called police.

On Nov. 25 he picked up a 13-year-old hitch-hiker and pulled a knife on her and intercourse took place in the back seat of the car on a road off the Malahat, court was told earlier.

Judge Stewart sentenced Lonsdale to three-year concurrent terms for indecent assault and six years for intercourse with a person under 14, the total to run concurrently.

He said he was "considerable sympathy" with Lonsdale whose actions were "probably due to some mental ailment", but he had even more sympathy for the victims.

Sympathy aside, he said, his primary duty is for the protection of the public.

He recommended that Lonsdale be screened as quickly as possible to find out if he is a suitable candidate for a remedial program in a medical centre in Abbotsford.

Early Trusses Homeowner's Last Straw

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

First it was the housebuilders pouring cement in the dark.

Then a tow truck was pulling a cement truck which had run out of gas.

And then the roof trusses arrived three weeks ahead of time.

"When these things happen, it starts to make you wonder," Charles Steffler, 3811 Dallimore in Metchosin, told county court Judge E. J. C. Stewart Thursday.

He and his wife Agnes are defendents in a mechanics lien claim for $8,598 brought by 3M Building Components Limited.

Also named as defendants were West Coast Savings Credit Union and South Island Drilling and Blasting Limited by W. R. Southward, counsel for Steffler, told the court the real issue involves Steffler and 3M and there is no issue involving the other two.

Vern Hildebrand, appearing for himself, told court he was the original founder of the company which was involved in component-building of houses. He said he is president of the company, which no longer is operating.

He said an agreement was signed in 1972 to build a component-type house for the Stefflers for $14,000 with completion in 45 days and $50 a day penalty if the companny failed to meet the deadline.

Because of road and weather conditions, he said, the deadline wasn't met. But Steffler told him to keep off the property and "our claim is for work done by sub-contract and suppliers which Steffler does enjoy."

Hildebrand said the house was built to include basement, framing, exterior sheathing but not finishing, roof, windows, all doors except the front door, rough plumbing, rough electrical wiring and basement floor.

Still to be done were drywall sheathing, finishing, heating, cabinets, painting, aluminum siding and fireplace.

He estimated the cost of the remaining items to be $7,100.

The company, he said, realized money would be lost on the construction and was willing to pay a $50 a day penalty but on Dec. 4, 1972, the Stefflers told him to keep off the property and they would work to finish it themselves.

Given the weather conditions at the time, which included snow, he said it would have taken 15 working days to finish the job.

The house was about 60 per cent completed. He admitted the roof was "put on in a very bad way" and would cost $400 to re-do but this had been agreed to earlier.

Appraiser John Bosded said he carried out an appraisal of the job and, in a report, said construction to Dec. 15, 1972, represented 44 per cent completion.

He estimated the total cost at $22,400.

He said the interior partitioning was poor quality, spacing of studding was not consistent, studs were "rather short" with nails showing, the roof "not expertly installed at all" and the furnace in but "I saw no provision for chimney."

Today, he said, the house would be worth $35,000 to $45,000.

Steffler said he was at the building site almost daily but work was slow and several times he had to lend workers tools.

At one point a back wall collapsed and three yards of concrete had to be broken out. Another time the pre-built walls arrived without plans and there was a delay of two or three hours.

Two walls were installed out of plumb and some interior partitions are still crooked.

He said he gave 3M a total of $4,000. His family moved into the house Jan. 28, 1973. He finished off the roof and had the plumbing and wiring completed. He had also worked by himself since then to complete the job but it would still need $5,000 or $6,000 to finish according to the original specifications, he said.

The case continued today.

Man Held Up At Bastion

A Vancouver man was held up by a knife-wielding man in Bastion Square Thursday morning, Victoria police reported today.

Hank Rook told police he was crossing the square at about 11:20 a.m. when a man came from behind and flashed a six-inch switchblade at him.

Rook said he gave him all he had — $160 — and the man, described as 6 feet 2 inches tall, 190 pounds, with reldish-blond hair, ran off. He was last seen heading down Wharf Street.

Needed: An Unhandy Man's Home Guide

AMONG THE BOOKS I yearn to stumble on in my do-it-yourself blunderings is one which we'll title 'The Unhandy Man's Guide! To the best of my knowledge, this manual has yet to be written, and that's a pity. Such a work would save me frustration, humiliation, and considerable knuckle skin.

I have any number of how-to books, written by professional craftsmen for the enlightenment of the handy amateur. But they share a common lack. They fail to tell the unhandy how to get himself out of the trouble that lurks for him behind even the simplest set of step-by-step instructions.

Somewhere in my collection of tips for the householder is a breezy dissertation on how to clean your own chimney and save a bill.

First you stuff some hay into a gunnysack.

Next, you add several good-sized stones.

Then you tie a rope around the neck of your sack, convey the apparatus to your roof, drop the sack into your chimney, and work it vigorously up and down with the rope.

The tipster, a conscientious fellow, adds several warnings. Make sure your fire is out to the last spark. Seal off your fireplace mouth if you would avoid a roomful of soot. Also, remember that scrambling about on a steep or damp roof is dangerous.

He should have added a further scrap of advice for the unhandy: what to do when the sack with the stones and the hay is deep in the chimney, and the rope lets go.

The Unhandy Man's Guide as I visualize it would provide for that contingency. Better still, it would point out in no uncertain terms that chimney-cleaning is best left to the experts.

Life's path for the determinedly inept and lefthanded is cluttered with projects that go astray. The shelf that leans, the leaking pipe-joint, the tippity garden bench that dumps the unwary on their backs — all tell the same story.

Here lives a well-meaning operator who might have pulled the job off handsomely if his instructor had chosen to walk the extra mile with him.

It isn't enough that he be told to spread the pattern on a table and cut along the dotted lines with sharp scissors. The Unhandy Man's Guide would warn him to slip a piece of plywood under that pattern so he won't do what a still-doghoused sore thumb of my acquaintance did to his wife's tablecloth.

One simple guideline of that sort would have kept me from contributing a low-comedy slide to the collection we occasionally inflict on visitors. It shows a worthy do-it-yourselfer staring at a carefully-constructed wooden hutch.

That's our smokehouse, and very well it serves us. I followed the list of instructions slavishly, reading some of them twice and even three times to make sure I wouldn't deviate from the plan.

With the last nail hammered, I called Win outside for a look. She walked twice around the smokehouse, eyeing it deadpan. Then she said, "That's dandy! Stay right where you are for a minute."

"I want to catch the look on your face," she said, "when you find you forgot to put a door in it!"

The Unhandy Man's Guide would show an awareness on every page that some of us were short-changed when the useful skills were passed out. It wouldn't, for example, tell a man with wrench in hand to loosen the nut, slip the whatsis up the hoozis, and seat the fanbelt on the pulleys. It would assume that the reader, an idiot in matters mechanical, hadn't a pig's idea of how to break the grip of a tough nut on a bolt.

(First you try a shot of freeing oil. Then you pound on the nut. If that doesn't work, you heat it and cool it. By this time your knuckles are flayed, the nut is battered to the point where the wrench won't engage it, and it's time to phone for a troubleshooter.)

This brings us to the sub-title that should go on The Unhandy Man's Guide when some yet-unheralded benefactor of us dubs gets around to publishing it.

'Let George do it!' the subtitle will read.

120 DIE IN FIERY CRASH

Babylift Begins in Disaster

Times News Services

SAIGON — A great U.S. Galaxy transport plane carrying the first orphans out of South Vietnam under President Ford's Operation Babylift crashed today near the Saigon airport, killing nearly half of the 294 persons aboard, most of them babies.

United States military sources said there is a "definite possibility" that sabotage may have caused the crash.

The plane was carrying 243 orphans ranging in age from eight months to 12 years, many of them fathered by U.S. servicemen who had served in Vietnam. Officials said about 100 orphans survived and that between 120 and 150 were killed.

Also aboard were 43 escorts from the U.S. mission in Saigon and eight air force crewmen.

The plane was 40 to 60 miles out of Saigon after takeoff when a rear cargo door blew out. This damaged the Galaxy's elevators as the plane flew at 31,000 feet.

The pilot, Maj. Dennis Traynor, turned back toward Tan Son Nyhut airbase but was unable to control the rate of descent and plunged to earth in a swampy area just outside the base. Ruptured fuel tanks burst into flames, sending up towers of smoke that could be seen in Saigon, six or seven miles away.

U.S. officials in Washington said they were dismayed by news of the crash but there were no plans to discontinue the flights.

It was the second incident of the day involving orphan flights. A Pan American world airways plane with 34 orphans aboard was grounded today in Guam by mechanical difficulties.

Military sources said the area of the crash site was 50 per cent controlled by the Viet Cong and there had been fighting in the area only Thursday night. Troops were rushed to the scene to secure the area as helicopters ferried out the dead and living.

"I saw 20 to 30 babies who survived carried out," said Dr. William Oldham, an American who is chief medical adviser to the government of Soth Vietnam.

"All those who survived must have been on the upper passenger deck. All those below in cargo section must have been killed."

"Many of those babies survived the crash beautifully," he said.

"I carried in one handicapped boy who still had his crutch and brace and all he said was he wanted to go potty."

A spokesman for the department of external affairs in Ottawa said 34 of the orphans had been destined for adoption in Canada.

The spokesman said "34 of those children were destined for Canadian families, and we have no information at all if some of these survived or if all were killed."

The controversial swept-wing Galaxy, the world's largest jet plane, had been delayed by mechanical problems on its departure earlier today from Clark Air Force Base in the Philippines. It was to have flown back to Clark for 48 hours of medical treatment of the orphans before flying on to Travis AFB, Calif. where Ford personally had planned to meet it.

The two-decker plane may have been carrying more passengers than ever had been attempted.

. . . Tiny Fingers Frozen In Death

Times News Services

SAIGON — Tiny fingers clutched in death a woman's breast. The lifeless arms of the woman still gripped the corpse of the baby she evidently had tried to protect . . .

Headless bodies were buried in the mud. . . .

This was the crash site of the United States Air Force C-5A Galaxy transport that was to have carried 243 Vietnamese orphans to the United States today.

Flames still leapt from sections of the giant transport which two hours earlier had crashed with a thunderous roar.

Rescuers slogged through knee-deep mud and waist-high grass in search of survivors.

It was a tragedy of stunning proportions even in a nation that has seen more than its share of them in 30 years of war.

"I just can't talk," said one American woman who survived.

The sudden whoosh of air out of the cabin of the plane, the largest in the world, was the first sign of the imminent tragedy.

Air Force Sgt. Jim Hadley, a Sacramento, Calif., medical technician finishing two weeks of reserve training with a weekend flight to Saigon, knew right away the plane was in a decompression condition.

"You could see the hole in the back of the plane, you could see the sunlight streaming in.

"Things started flying around. Eyeglasses. Pens. Pieces of insulation tore off the ceiling. The pillows exploded. They were plastic lined.

"That went on for a little while until the air stopped. By then the oxygen masks had dropped down.

"There weren't enough oxygen masks. We had to keep moving them from kid to kid. We kept on our own because otherwise you get drowsy and then you go out."

★ Thieu Won't Quit

SAIGON (UPI) — President Nguyen Van Thieu said today the South Vietnamese cabinet has resigned and a new government is being formed.

The change of government came after the Saigon regime claimed to have cracked the second plot in a week for a coup against Thieu.

There were increasing signs that Thieu, with U.S. backing, intended to fight all attempts to force him out of office.

U.S. Army Chief of Staff Gen. Frederick C. Weyand said he agrees fully with Thieu's military efforts despite massive setbacks to the South Vietnamese armed forces.

Weyand visited Nha Trang, 188 miles northeast of Saigon, last Saturday and said then: "I'm heartened by the performance of (South Vietnamese army) troops. The situation here appears stabilized. They're not demoralized in any sense of the word. We're in sort of a breather."

Two days later Nha Trang fell to the Communists. Civilians and soldiers fled the city and two other provincial capitals, giving them up without a fight.

Weyand, President Ford's personal envoy in South Vietnam for the past week, said that "The North Vietnamese army . . . can be defeated."

He told newsmen the Saigon government's abandonment

Inflation Mechanism Unchanging

By WILLIAM REES-MOGG, Times of London editor

The circumstances which predispose a society to inflation are of a varied and complex kind. There is therefore room for many views about the ultimate causes of inflation, and these views may all have some truth in them. They remain very confusing to the public, which feels that inflation is an abstract subject on which the economists themselves disagree. There is still more disagreement among politicians, some of whom have no proper understanding of the subject, all of whom are subject to political pressures, often to do the wrong thing.

I am convinced, have become convinced, that there is a single mechanism of inflation, which can be isolated and described. I do not take the view that this mechanism, which is a monetary one, operates in a vacuum. It is subject to external, non-monetary influences in its inception and at every stage of its progression. Nevertheless, there is one difference between the mechanism and the influences from outside. The mechanism is always the same. A monetary account of any inflation always shows the same pattern of operation. The outside factors are often quite different.

One can see this both historically and geographically. In the French inflation of the 1790s the prime non-monetary force was the French Revolution and the hazards that it faced; in the German inflation of 1921 to 1923 the prime non-monetary force was the reparations question and the French occupation of the Ruhr; in the German inflation after 1945 the prime non-monetary force was defeat; in the current British inflation it is trade union power. In all these inflations the basic monetary pattern has been the same.

Currently one can make the same point geographically: Japan, Italy, France, Britain and the United States are all suffering severe inflation. The non-monetary factors, mainly trade union power and oil price movements (in so far as those are regarded as political and monopolistic) differ very much from country to country. The temptation to blame oil prices is probably at its highest in Japan.

This distinction between an unchanging mechanism of inflation and changing political forces seems to me to be crucial. If one can master the mechanism then one can master inflation; yet if the mechanism is brought into operation by political forces, one will only be allowed to master the mechanism if one can also master or bring under persuasion the political forces.

If this view is correct it follows first of all that any non-monetary approach will fail. For instance, the recent Conservative attempt in Britain to combine inflationary monetary policies with control of inflatian by non-monetary means was bound to be self-defeating. Yet at the same time the simplistic monetary view that it is possible by monetary means alone to control inflation is erroneous. Governments inflate because they feel that they have no political alternative but to inflate. They may or may not understand the dangers of inflating, but they act as they do in response to political forces. Those forces cannot simply be disregarded. Apart from anything else, in a democracy those forces may express themselves in an election victory for another party.

My views of the causes of inflation are not original; they belong indeed to the broad tradition of monetary economics. Nevertheless they represent a view of the character in inflation which is not universally accepted.

Bridge Pickets Ready to Talk

Striking civic employees today said they are willing to co-operate to avoid industrial layoffs or a Labor Relations Board order arising from closure of Johnson Street bridge lift span.

The possibility of production shutdown at B.C. Forest Products Ltd. sawmill and curtailment of plywood runs at its adjoining mill on Selkirk Water was raised this morning by BCFP manager Walter Nelson, who said an order may be sought to curtail picketing of the bridge.

Jim Walker, president of Local 50 Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the union was meeting this afternoon with BCFP, Smith Cedar Products and Butler-Lafarge to discuss the bridge closure.

"We can co-operate with reasonable people," Walker said.

Nelson said the company has chip scows waiting to be towed out of the harbor and some 20 railway cars of lumber and plywood ready for rail barge transport by way of Canadian National Railways Pt. Ellice ferry dock.

Court Restricts Book Salesmen

It marks the first time in Canada a government has joined with a consumer association to seek and obtain a court order stopping a certain type of business practice.

The provincial department of consumer services announced today the specific terms of the temporary injunction against P. F. Collier and Son Ltd. following the March 26 decision of the Supreme Court in Kelowna.

The action against the company, publishers of Colliers' Encyclopedia, was launched by the Kelowna branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada with the support of B.C.'s director of trade practices.

The court ruled that prima facie proof had been established that Colliers' sales presentation was capable of deceiving consumers and therefore violated the B.C. Trade Practices Act.

Several deceptive practices were alleged in the action and the court granted the temporary injunction against two specific practices employed by Colliers.

Those practices, according to the consumer services department announcement, involved the failure of salesmen to disclose immediately that the purpose of their door-to-door calls was for the sales of an encyclopedia. Customers were apparently led to believe the purpose was for something else.

Also it was charged the salesmen did not give enough emphasis to the full and complete price of their sales items, quoting instead a cost per day price.

$20M FREE LOAN GRANTED TO BCR

B.C. Railway has been granted a $20 million interest-free loan from the provincial government.

Premier Barrett said Thursday a cabinet order, passed during the day, gives the railway money to cover financial requirements until new legislation extending BCR's borrowing power is approved by the legislature.

That bill, now before the house, would expand BCR's borrowing capacity from $440 million to $650 million.

But the legislation may not be passed for several weeks and Barrett said the money is needed immediately.

Those funds, plus another $15 million granted the railway in January to cover operating losses incurred by the seven-week rail strike last year, must be paid back to the government as soon as the legislation is passed and it can borrow the money through regular channels.

Barrett has promised the legislature a full report and financial statement on the railway later this session.

Costs May Force B.C. Tel Layoff

B.C. Tel will lay off some staff in all major centres in the province, including Victoria, starting May 15, a company spokesman said today.

The layoffs will affect those in the lowest seniority categories.

Ken Horodyski, spokesman for B.C. Tel in Victoria, said the layoffs were necessary because of increasing costs.

A conciliation officer's report awarding B.C. Tel's 14,000 employees an 18 per cent pay increase this year and 14 per cent in 1976 would add $2.8 million to the labor bill in this year alone, Horodyski said.

The report is being studied by the company. Part of the report has been accepted by B.C. Tel but the pay award has not been dealt with by the company.

The employees, members of the B.C. Federation of Telephone Workers, are currently voting on whether to accept the report.

Snowstorm Rampages East to Halifax

Times News Services

Southeastern Canada today dug out from an April blizzard which paralyzed air and ground traffic and was blamed for at least five highway deaths.

The weather bureau said the spring snowstorm, which Thursday lashed southern Ontario and Quebec with winds up to 50 miles an hour, dumped the winter's highest accumulation of snow over the region. Eighteen inches of snow fell in some areas of Ontario and Montreal was showered with 11.3 inches.

In Halifax, tugs were standing by the gypsum-carrier Colin Brown early today after the vessel went aground in the harbor approaches during the violent storm.

Elsewhere in the Maritimes, Saint John, N.B., reported one inch of snow as the storm reached New Brunswick where between five and 10 inches are expected before the disturbance passes.

Winds gusting to 40 m.p.h. accompanied the storm and police said roads in the Woodstock and Florenceville areas of northern New Brunswick were almost impassable.

"If you didn't have it tied down," said a New Jersey policeman, "you didn't have it this morning."

Today's Highlights

Klahanie, on 2 and 6 at 12:30. New season debut for this popular outdoor series opens with a two-part program entitled, North to Polar Seas, about a scientific tour in the Canadian Arctic. (30 mins.)

Nana, on 9 at 6:30. Show in its entirety, the five-part television adaptation of Emile Zola's novel, that follows the life of an ambitious and promiscuous Parisian prostitute. Her story is told against the decadence that prevailed in the Second Empire immediately before the Franco-Prussian War. (This program comes with the warning that it is not suitable for all members of the family.) (5 hrs.)

Carol Burnett Show, on 7 and 12 at 9. In the last show of the current season, Carol spotlights her regulars Vicki Lawrence and Harvey Korman, and welcomes her most popular guest Tim Conway. (60 mins.)

Sammy and Company, on 4 at 10:45. First in a series of variety shows hosted by Sammy Davis Jr. and a company of regulars that include Avery Schreiber and Johnny Brown. Tonight, his special guests are Dinah Shore, Redd Foxx and Alan Alda. (90 mins.)

Pilot Film, on 7 at 11:30. Mr. and Mrs. Cop — a pilot for a proposed series about a husband-and-wife police team, starring Anthony Costello and Marianne McAndrews. (30 mins.)

Movies

Behave Yourself (xx), on 4 at noon. Shelley Winters and Farley Granger star in this 1951 comedy-drama about the complications that develop when a couple accidentally acquire a trained dog that belongs to a gang of crooks.

The Little Colonel (xx), on 11 at 1. A 1935 Shirley Temple drama set in the post-Civil War South.

Cheaper By the Dozen (xxx), on 5 at 2. Clifton Webb gives one of his best performances in this corny but heart-warming 1959 comedy about the misadventures of a very large family. Based on the best-selling novel of the same name, and co-starring Myrna Loy and Jeanne Crain.

The Wackiest Ship in the Army (xxx), on 7 at 5. An entertaining 1961 blend of war heroics and comedy about a sailing expert who is tricked into commanding and aged ship disguised as a pleasure vessel which will secretly land a scout in enemy territory. Cast includes Jack Lemmon, Chips Rafferty and John Lund.

Flap, on 4 at 8 and 8 at 9. No rating available on this 1970 blend of comedy and social comment starring Anthony Quinn as Flapping Eagle, an American Indian determined to draw attention to the plight of his impoverished tribe. Supporting cast includes Shelley Winters, Claude Akins and Tony Bill.

Barefoot in the Park (xxx), on 5 at 8. Neil Simon's romantic, funny comedy was a Broadway smash, and this 1967 film adaptation starring Robert Redford and Jane Fonda does the original justice. Redford (repeating his Broadway role) and Fonda play a pair of newlyweds with more ideas than money and mother-in-law Mildred Natwick is on hand to add to their problems in her expert comedy fashion.

The Kremlin Letter (xxx), on 6 at 8:30. An all-star cast (Orson Welles, Bibi Andersson, Richard Boone, Max Von Sydow and Patrick O'Neal) is the draw in this somewhat confusing 1970 film adaptation of Noel Behn's espionage novel about Western intelligence agents involved in Russian cold war intrigue.

Dingaka (xx), on 2 at 9. On-location filming in Africa adds some interest to this offbeat 1965 film about an attorney who takes on the case of a tribesman accused of killing a rival he believes murdered his daughter, starring Stanley Baker and Juliet Prowse.

The Crime Club, on 7 at 10. An unpreviewed pilot for a proposed crime-drama series about a group of detectives, lawyers and writers who have formed a society to prevent and solve crimes. The only familiar face in the cast is Robert Lansing.

Every Day's a Holiday (xx), on 11 at 10. A 1938 Mae West comedy, but unfortunately not one of her best as her adventures are far too contrived and the dialogue is routine. Edmund Lowe co-stars.

A Time for Love (xx), on 12 at 10. Two hour-long, introspective love stories about opposites meeting on romantic common ground. The first, No Promises, No Pledges is about a square young executive who learns to trust his instincts and buck the patterned corporate - life groove, starring John Davidson and Lauren Hutton. The second,

SPENCER TRACY
. . . on 5 at 10:45 p.m.

Go Sing the Songs, Mark depicts a sad-faced rock star who loves a teacher of deaf children, but won't let go of his frenzied life-style, starring Christopher Mitchum (Robert's son) and Bonnie Bedelia.

Inherit the Wind (xxxx), on 5 at 10:15. A superb 1960 movie adaptation of the acclaimed, powerful Broadway play about the famous Scopes "monkey trial" of 1925, in which a school teacher is arrested and tried for teaching Darwin's theory of evolution. Spencer Tracy and Frederic March are flawless as defender Clarence Darrow and prosecutor William Jennings Bryan and Gene Kelly is surprisingly effective as the newspaper reporter who was instrumental in focusing national attention to the court proceedings. Recommended.

Flap, on 6 at 11:20. (See earlier this evening for details.)

The Young Lions (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. Excellent performances by Marlon Brando, Montgomery Clift and Dean Martin highlight this well-produced 1958 film adaptation of Irwin Shaw's best-selling novel about three reluctant Second World War soldiers, and their eventual fates. Brando portrays a realistic German; Clift an American Jew; and Martin a successful entertainer reluctantly drafted into service.

The Good, the Bad and the Ugly (xxx), on 8 at midnight. An Italian western "classic", the first (1966) in a series of three that made Clint Eastwood a major European star. The soundtrack and the "shoot-out" scene are especially good. Strictly for fans of the so-called "spaghetti" westerns.

The Lost Man (xxx), on 6 at 1:20. An offbeat, but well-acted 1969 drama about a fugitive on the run and a social worker who falls in love with him. Sidney Poitier and Joanne Shimkus are good in their role but the best performance is by Al Freeman as a questioning civil right leader.

Monsieur Beaucaire (xxx), on 7 at 1:30. A zany 1946 Bob Hope comedy about a barber in the court of France's Louis XV who by accident is sent to Spain to marry a princess (Joan Caulfield). Better than Hope's usual fare.

How Green Was My Valley (xxxx), on 8 at 3:25 a.m. Six Academy Awards went to this moving 1941 John Ford study of a coal mining family in Wales, starring Walter Pidgeon, Maureen O'Hara and Donald Crisp.

SATURDAY FEATURE MOVIE — Anthony Quinn (left) and Claude Akins star in Flap, the 1970 story of a pair of rambunctuous modern-day Indians determined to make life better for their people, to be telecast on Channel 4 at 8 p.m., Channel 8 at 9 p.m. and Channel 6 at 11:20 p.m.

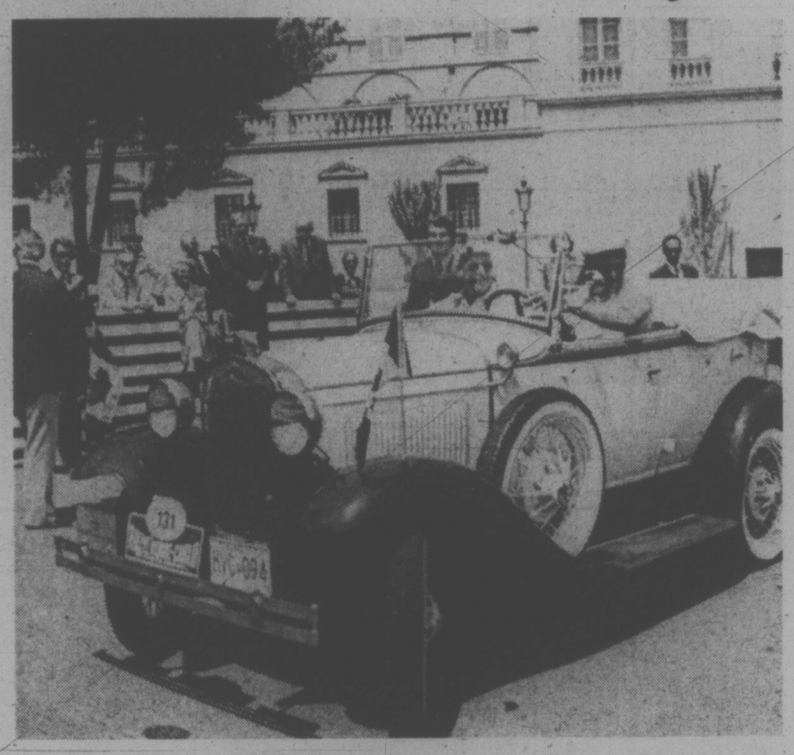
Canada's 'Flossie' Entered In Monte Carlo Car Rally

The Monte Carlo Rally first run in 1911 is one of the most prestigious rallies in the entire world. To commemorate this longstanding tradition, and to celebrate the 25th anniversary of His Highness Prince Rainier of Monaco, 1974 was chosen as the year for a rally of antique cars manufactured between 1923 and 1939. The lone Canadian participant in this event was "Flossie," a 1930 Model A, four-door Phaeton, restored by the Craven Foundation. The results of this oldtimers competition will be seen on CTV's Wide World of Sports, Saturday, April 5, 4:30-6:00 p.m.

Under the aegis of producer Garth Fowlie, CTV film crews followed "Flossie" and the rally the 1,570 kilometres that took them from Calais to Reims, onward to Chaumont, through the scenic mountains past Grenoble and forward due south through Cannes, Nice and finally to Monaco. Farth Fowlie produced and directed this forty-three minute film.

Once the Foundation's application to the rally was accepted, three months of preparations followed that included dismantling, restoration and re-assembling. Then "Flossie" was shipped to London, England, one of the 17 departure points of the run. After concentrated road testing, "Flossie" and three English entries left London, ferried from Dover to Calais, and thus completed the first measure of a very demanding route.

In overall standings, Canada came 66th out of 94 entries. Driver Frank Francis, general manager of the foundation, and navigator Peter Bone, vice-president of the Craven Foundation were proud of the Phaeton's performance in view of the more powerful machines they were competing against in this rally.



'Flossie'—a 1930 Model A, Four-Door Phaeton

Jacques de Mathieu, with his wife Andree, came out on top with their 1926 Hispano Suiza, winning the Prince Rainier Cup and 10,000 francs. Eric Knoux of Denmark, driving a 1926 Bugatti won the second classification for the Cup of the City of Monaco and 5,000 francs.

The cars started from 17 points and the rally was divided into two parts. "The Concentration Route" had the cars all leaving from various points throughout Europe and meeting in Annecy. "The Common Route" then had all cars following the same route into Monaco.

RESPONSE PROMPTS NANA RE-TELECAST

All five episodes on the BBC roduction of Nana will be een as a special all-evening iarthon, April 5 on Channel

Due to overwhelming audi- nce response, Channel 9 is ringing back this popular eries before its rights expire, overting it to non-air status t the end of April.

Adapted for television from ie Emile Zola novel, the eries portrays the life of a uccessful French courtesan mid-19th century Paris. atherine Schofield stars as ana, a former streetwalker ho charms and beguiles the en of high society. She de- ghts in using and manipula- ng them, attaining power er their lives. Eventually ey are destroyed. Yet she alone is not guilty. Zola makes clear that Nana merely absorbs and re-focuses the greed and hpocrisy characteristic of the upper classes upon which she preys.

In the end, the story is moral: the characters must pay for the evil they have done. Each character meets death in the way most symbolic of his own weakness. Nana herself dies of smallpox, rotten and disfigured.

This is a series for adults, containing much nudity and sexually explicit material. Part I at 6:30 p.m., April 5, followed by Part II at 7:30 p.m., Part III at 8:30 p.m., Part IV at 9:30 p.m., and Part V at 10:30 p.m.

CTV Covers Junior Curling

The World Junior Curling Championship from the East York Curling Club in Toronto will be featured on Wide World of Sports, Saturday, April 5, on CTV.

Curlers under 21 years of age compete for honors in this new championship, sanctioned by the International Curling Federation. Countries competing include Scotland, Sweden, Norway, Switzerland, Italy, France, Germany, U.S.A. and Canada.

The Canadian team will be skipped by 18-year-old Robb King of Edmonton, Alberta. Scotland's youthful foursome skipped by Peter Wilson and Jan Ullsten's Swedish team should provide the stiffest competition to the Canadian curlers.

The World Junior Curling championship consits of a complete round robin of 10-end games with the top four teams playing off for a berth in the final. Winners of the final receive the new Uniroyal Trophy.

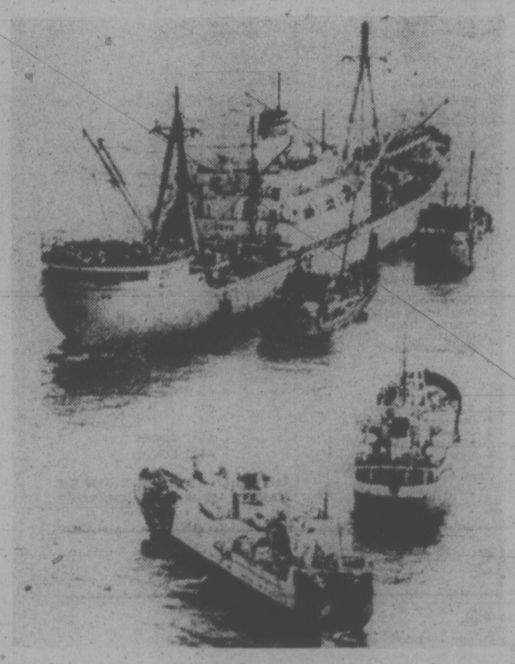
The Fishing Must Stop Before It's Too Late!

Will the Fishing Have to Stop? is a Nova production of special interest to people in the Northwest. Airing during Springfest, April 6 at 6:30 p.m. this Nova program interviews many local residents in an attempt to discover the causes and ramifications of the growing fish shortage.

The impact of modern technology on the fishing industry has been immense. It is now clear that fisheries have to be managed if they are to survive. Through animation and documentary film, this program shows why proper management must be based on a clear understanding of why fish are there in the first place. The show also provides a good discussion of the usefulness of a 200-mile limit.

The film looks in detail at research on upwellings — those highly localized areas with a prodigious biological productivity where "fertilizer" is brought up from the depths. The film examines the upwelling responsible for the Peruvian anchovy, and documents the strange case of the diappearing sardine. Nature is shown to be capricious — so even with management the ocean's capacity is limited. But within this limit, the precious protein resources of the ocean can be much more effectively utilized than they are at the moment.



Faculty from the University of Washington's Department of Oceanography appearing on the program include Richard Dugdale, Research Professor; Jane Dugdale, Senior Oceanographer; James Kelley, Associate Professor; and John Walsh, Research Assistant Professor.

Other university experts on the program include Richard Thorne, Senior Research Associate with the Fisheries Research Institute, and John Liston, Director of the Institute for Food Science and Technology. Mr. Liston was filmed at the University Seafood and Poultry Company, located in Seattle's University district. Dale Erickson, owner of the market, was also interviewed. The film documents the opinions of Lee Alverson — with the National Marine Fisheries Services — and of his associate, Loh-lee Low.

The Nova crew said they had started working on the program with an emphasis on aquaculture, but soon realized that the problems of the seas were much more vast and complicated: aquaculture in itself was no answer.

PAUL SOLES AND HELEN BURNS star in the delightful Stephen Leacock story, The Yahi Bahi Society of Mrs. Rasselyer-Brown, to be telecast on Performance, Sunday at 9 p.m. on Channel 2 and 6.

CBC Features Leacock Comedy

Take the timeless wit of Stephen Leacock, have one of Canada's top contemporary humorists, Donald Harron adapt it for television, and get the CBC's multi-award-winner Norman Campbell to direct.

Add a top-notch cast, sumptuous settings and a first-rate production crew, and the experience and expertise of producer Eric Till and executive producer Robert Allen.

The result, The Yahi Bahi Society of Mrs. Rasselyer-Brown, a delightful spoof of the mores and foibles of the idle rich in a small Ontario town during the carefree era just prior to the Great War. The full-hour production will be telecast on CBC drama's Performance series Sunday, April 6 at 9 p.m.

The story is based on incidents from Leacock's Arcadian Adventures with the Idle Rich. Would-be society leader Mrs. Rasselyer-Brown (Helen Burns) quickly discards weekly Dante reading as her favorite cultural pastime when she is initiated into the mystic Eastern philosophy of Boo Hoo, as interpreted by the prophet Yahi Bahi (Paul Soles), self-styled but somewhat suspect disciple of the great Boo Hoo himself.

It's all in fun, of course, and the imaginative settings and lavish costumes — abetted by the creative imagery of Emmy Award-winner Norman Campbell — evoke a nostalgic sense of a charming, gentler era during Canada's growing up process — before the sobering realities of two world wars and th technological boom helped bring about the more frantic life-style that prevails today.

HEIMAEY: 1973

In January, 1973, the eruption of a volcano on an Icelandic island forced 5,000 people to evacuate their homes and destroyed a major portion of the town of Vestmannae yjar. The Heimaey Eruption: Iceland 1973 documents the history of this volcano, from its first recent eruption to its last lava flow. Appearing as part of Channel 9's Springfest, the film will be seen April 6 at 5:45 p.m.

The film first concentrates on the activity of the volcano itself: action and slow motion photography capture the ejections of bomb and ash. Then we see the damage: the town empty, the houses near the base of the volcano literally buried in ash.

The second part of the film was shot in April, shortly after the cone of the volcano collapsed, allowing lava to move into the town. Over 300 homes were destroyed. Cold sea water pumped onto the lava caused it to harden into a wall that held back the rest of the flow: the town was saved from total destruction.

Next we see the recovery. By mid-July, the eruption has stopped. The one remaining fish processing plant has reopened, and trawlers are again port. The first families have returned, and new grass is coming through the ash. But nobody knows for sure when the volcano will erupt again.

This program should be of great local interest in view of the recent activities of Mt. Baker.

Middle Age: Joy or Trauma?

It is the peak time for divorce, depression, suicide. It is a time when the body is subjected to physical change and the mind tormented by uncertainty. But it is also a time for review of the past and a serious contemplation of the future. More fascinating is that ordinary, average people realize a new importance. They can see for the first time a chance to make their presence felt and go on to roles of dedication, even greatness. The time is The Middle Years, the next captivating episode in CTV's award winning series The Human Journey, airing Sunday, April 6, 10:00-11:00 p.m. on the CTV Television Network.

To some it is foreboding, but to others it is the final stage in the maturing process fortable with the skills, knowlwhen one finally feels comedge and experience gathered over the years. There are still others for whom it means nothing; they are barely aware of it as a definite stage of life.

Gail Sheehy is a journalist who, in researching middle age, found a pattern that shows that the whole of life is made up of well-defined but alternating periods of potential crisis and consolidation, each of which is meant to take us to a higher level of maturity.

Movies

Crazy Desire (xxx), on 11 at noon. A charming, 1964 Italian-made comedy-drama about a middle-aged man trying momentarily to re-capture his youth. Although dubbed into English, and a little long, the film contains many amusing and poignant moments.

Carry On Again, Doctor (xx), on 8 at 12:45. Another in the series of English-made "carry on" comedies, this filmed in 1969 and starring Kenneth Williams and Jim Dale.

The Visit (xx), on 5 at 2:30. The cyncial, brittle cutting edge of the fascinating play by Friedrich Duerrenmatt on which this 1964 movie is based, has been lost somewhere along the way. The storyline however, about a woman who goes to great lengths to wreak vengeance on her former lover, has been retained and the performances of Ingrid Bergman and Anthony Quinn are competent.

What's the Matter With Helen? on 5 at 8. No rating available on this 1971 thriller set in Depression-era Hollywood, about a series of macabre events at a dancing school run by two sisters. An excellent cast includes Debbie Reynolds, Shelley Winters, Dennis Weaver and Agnes Moorehead.

Mambo (xx), on 11 at 8. Silvana Mangano, Shelley Wintyers and Vittorio Gassman star in this 1955 Italian-made melodrama about a salesgirl who rises to the heights as a glamorous dancer, only to become involved in a complicated love affair.

Sign It Death, on 4 at 10:30. No rating available on this recently-made-for-television mystery about a beautiful woman who discovers that the one sure way of getting what she wants is to kill those who stand in her way, starring Francesca Annis.

Raintree County (xxx), on 7 at 10:45. An all-star cast (Elizabeth Taylor, Montgomery Clift, Eva Marie Saint, Lee Marvin and Rod Taylor) highlights this large-scale 1957 production about the effects of the Civil War on an Indiana community. Miss Taylor plays a wilfull Southern Belle who stops at nothing to get what she wants.

EVA MARIE SAINT

She Wore a Yellow Ribbon (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. An excellent 1949 John Ford western about the U.S. Cavalry men at a frontier outpost and their constant vigil against marauding Indians. Brilliantly directed with a fine cast that ingludes John Wayne, Victor McLaglen, Ben Johnson, Mildred Natwick, Joanne Dru and John Agar.

Faces (xxxx), on 2 at midnight. A brilliant and moving 1968 drama, written and directed by John Cassavetes, and richly deserving the acclaim (including three Academy Award nominations) it received. The story concerns the disintegration of the marriage, after a fourteen-year period, of a middle-class couple in California. What is unique about this document is not the plot line, which is familiar enough, but the improvisational quality of the actor's performances, which is so perceptive you feel that you are eavesdropping on the most personal of conversations. The movie has been described as "a stunning, perceptive study of American manners and morals."

Shark River (xx), on 8 at 2. A mediocre 1954 melodrama about two brothers fleeing from the law through the Florida swamplands of the 1860s.

Thank You All Very Much (xxx), on 6 at 2:30. Sandy Dennis gives a fine performance as a Ph. D. candidate who finds herself pregnant after her first affair, and decides to have and keep her baby, in this excellent 1969 British-made drama. It's a touching, unsentimental presentation of a "controversial" subject, as the film does not moralize or patronize, choosing instead to portray a vulnerable but capable woman, taking care of herself and succeeding as an independent person.

PROFILE IN MUSIC

PBS Salutes Opera Star

Profiles in Music: Beverly Sills — a Springfest presentation April 7 at 8 p.m. — is a salute to this popular opera coloratura. BBC interviewer Bernard Levin narrates the program, which balances a discussion of Ms. Sills' personal life with in-studio performances of arias from The Barber of Seville, The Ballad of Baby Doe, Julius Caesar, Roberto Devereaux, Manon, and Lucia de Lamamour. These arias are sung in full costume and in stage setting.

Ms. Sills, most loved for her earthy and "human" personality, was first hailed in September, 1966, when she appeared with the New York City Opera in a rare performance of Handel's Julius Caesar. Sills was featured as Cleopatra, dazzling critics and audiences alike with her easy command of five complicated and demanding coloratura arias. After a strong ten-year career, Sills was hailed as the international music scene's "latest discovery." In the years since, she has appeared in most of the great coloratura roles.

Sills is noted for her acting abilities as well as her music talent. She has stated that she will sacrifice the beautiful note for a meaningful sound — whenever that best serves the dramatic moment.

Beverly Sills

Springfest Opens With Strauss Music

The Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra has been giving lavish and gala New Year's Eve concerts for over two decades. This traditional event, Vienna's version of America's Times Square festivities, has been broadcast live from Austria to as many as 27 nations and to over 100 million viewers. This year, for the first time, it comes to national American television, April 7 at 6:35 p.m. as part of Channel 9's Springfest.

The Vienna Philharmonic New Year's Eve Concert features maestro Willi Boskovsky conducting an all-Strauss program. The program also includes dance performances by the Vienna State Opera Ballet Corps and the Vienna Volksoper Ballet, both costumed to elicit the charms and flavor of Old Vienna.

Among the works performed are: Freut euch des Lebens, Op. 340 (waltz), Rasch in der Tat, Op. 166 (polka), and An Der Schonen Blauen Donau (waltz) by Johann Strauss; and Frauenherz (poka mazurka) by Josef Strauss.

Popular Outdoor Series Back on CBC

The popular series about the modern-day adventures of a teenage boy growing up in the wild, rugged and beautiful mining and bush country of northern Canada, is being repeated on CBC-TV on Tuesday nights at 7:30 p.m.

Adventures in Rainbow Country was a smash hit when it was first aired on the network in 1970-71.

Though production difficulties delayed the start of the 26-episode series, its showing was an immediate success making it the most popular Canadian series on TV that season.

French, German, Japanese, Spanish and Italian versions have been shown in over 20 countries and the series is currently being syndicated in the U.S. by 20th Century-Fox.

In Canada, it had an audience of over four million outdrawning Hockey Night in Canada and only exceeded by the Wonderful World of Disney, according to a Bureau of Broadcast Measurement record for the week of Jan. 11-24, 1971.

Filmed entirely on location — there is not a single studio sequence — Adventures in Rainbow Country features a large cast of exclusively Canadian actors. During the filming, the small town of Whitefish Falls on Georgian Bay was transformed into a movie production centre as a 50-man crew settled in to create the series in 1969.

Stephen Cottier plays the part of the young boy, Billy Williams. He was chosen for the part over 500 other hopefuls. Buckley Petawabano, a full-blooded Cree Indian, plays the part of Billy's friend Pete Gawa and Lois Maxwell plays Billy's mother.

Many major Canadian actors are featured in guest star roles throughout the telling of the adventure stories. They include Gordon Pinsent, Austin Willis, Percy Rodriquez, Peter Donat, Margot Kidder, Len Birman, Sean Sullivan, Tom Harvey and Don Borisenko.

It will run on the CBC network from April 8 to September 16.

Today's Highlights

Oscar Awards, on 2, 5 and 6 at 6. Four emcees (Bob Hope, Sammy Davis Jr., Shirley MacLaine and Frank Sinatra) preside over this year's 47th annual Academy Awards ceremony. A highlight of this year's festivities is a Sammy Davis Jr., song-and-dance tribute to Fred Astaire. Among the presenters are Ingrid Bergman, Peter Falk, Goldie Hawn, Tatum and Ryan O'Neal, John Wayne, Danny Thomas and Glenda Jackson. (2 hrs.)

Children's Special, on 9 at 6:35. Muppet Grover Monster and Jean March (Rose in Upstairs, Downstairs) co-host this presentation of animated films gathered from the children's series Sesame Street and The Electric Company. (60 mins.)

Cavalcade of Champions Awards, on 5 at 8. Barbara Walters and Bob Hope co-host this special honoring professional and amateur athletes. Film clips of the nominees in action, which include baseball's Lou Brock; basketball's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar; football's Ken Stabler; golf's Jane Blalock and Johnny Miller; and hockey's Bobby Orr, will be shown. (90 mins.)

The Violin, on 8 at 8. Repeat telecast of the 1975 Oscar-nominated (it may be a winner by the time this is shown) drama about an unusual friendship between an old man and two young boys who are brought together by their love of the violin. The music was composed and is played by Maurice Soloway, who also plays the old man in the drama. (30 mins.)

Zulu Romeo: Good Start, on 9 at 8. Magnificent aerial footage highlights this report on the 1974 World Gliding Championships held at Waikerie, Australia. In all 67 pilots from 23 countries met in the two-week competition. (60 mins.)

CBS News Special, on 7 at 9. Indochina:1975 — The End of the Road?, an assessment of the advances made by Communist forces in South Vietnam and Cambodia. This special report is also expected to examine the plight of refugees in both countries and review the history of the fighting in Indochina. (60 mins.)

Hello, Dali, on 9 at 9. A documentary of the flamboyant surrealist Salvador Dali, who was filmed with his wife Gala in their Spanish villa. The film includes Dali's views on subjects ranging from his wealth to his fear of death, a look at some of his possessions, and glimpses of the unusual architecture of the couple's home. (40 mins.)

Adventures in Rainbow Country, on 2 and 6 at 9:30. Return of the popular outdoor series about the adventures of a young boy growing up in the rugged country of Northern Ontario. The CBC says in a press release that this series was one of their most popular, and is still enjoying success in Europe and Australia. (30 mins.)

Oil and Water: Will They Mix?, on 5 at 9:30. Repeat of the documentary which examines the economy and the environmental impact of oil tankers on Puget Sound. (30 mins.)

Movies

A Most Unusual Woman, on 11 at noon. No rating available on this 1964 Italian-made drama about a small-town promoter who marries a pathetic girl whose face and body are covered with hair. Ugo Tognazzi and Annie Girardot star.

I Love a Mystery (x), on 8 at 12:45. Ida Lupino, David Hartman, Terry-Thomas and Don Knotts star in this 1973 made-for-TV revival of the old radio series about three detectives who fly to a private island to flush out a mission billionaire.

Shock Treatment (x), on 5 at 2:30. A terrible 1964 melodrama about psychotic; an actor pretending to be mad; and a sinister woman psychiatrist—improbably thrown together at a state mental hospital. The script is an embarrassment to an excellent cast that includes Lauren Bacall, Stuart Whitman, Roddy McDowall and Carol Lynley.

Guess Who's Sleeping in My Bed? (xx), on 4 at 7:30. A fairly good 1973 comedy extracted from a rather ridiculous situation. Dean Jones plays the ex-husband of Barbara Eden, who barges into his ex-wife's house with his new family in tow, and asks to be put up for awhile.

The Runaways, on 12 at 8. The whole family will enjoy this 1975 television adaptation of the novel by Victor Canning about trust and friendship between a boy and a wild animal. Running away from foster parents who think he is a thief, a teen-age orphan finds an unexpected friend from another runaway — an escaped leopard from a wild animal compound — and their common problems lead to a series of adventures. Cast includes Josh Albee, Dorothy McGuire and Van Williams.

Soldier in the Rain (xxx), on 12 at 9:30. An outstanding performance by Jackie Gleason highlights this offbeat but entertaining 1963 comedy-drama about the bond of friendship between a worldly-wise master sergeant (Gleason) and a naive hero-worshipper (Steve McQueen). Tuesday Weld co-stars.

Legacy of Blood, on 4 at 10:30. A made-for-television movie starring Moses Gunn as an insurance agent whose life is threatened when he is unable to pay back a loan shark.

JACKIE GLEASON
. . . on 12 at 9:30 p.m.

The Sweet Ride (xx), on 7 at 10:45. A sleazy 1968 tale about the loves of a hippie girl who hangs around too many surfers and motorcyclists for her own good, made palatable by the performance of the lovely Jacqueline Bisset. Tony Franciosa and Michael Sarrazin co-star.

After the Fox (xx), on 12 at 11:30. Considering all the talent working on this 1966 comedy, both behind (director — Vittoria De Sica; script — Neil Simon) and in front (Peter Sellers, Victor Mature, Britt Eklund) of the cameras, this movie should be great. But it's only a mildly funny tale about an ingenious convict (Sellers) who gets involved in moviemaking in order to cover his latest caper. Victor Mature gets the most laughs as he hams it up playing a has-been American movie star.

The Bird with the Crystal Plumage (xxx), on 2 at midnight. A slick, well-produced 1970 Italian-made murder mystery. Tony Musante plays a witness to a near-murder who gets obsessed with amateur sleuthing as he tries to solve a series of murders involving beautiful women. Suzy Kendall co-stars.

Geronimo (x), on 6 at midnight. Routine 1962 western starring Chuck Connors in the title role as the warrior who fights the cavalry for better conditions for his people.

Rio Grande (xxx), on 8 at midnight. An epic John Ford western, highlighted by plenty of action, human interest, sweeping photography and a fine cast that includes John Wayne and Maureen O'Hara.

Frontier Gal (xx), on 7 at 12:45. Yvonne De Carlo, Rod Cameron and Andy Devine star in this entertaining 1945 western about the troubles that arise when a lady saloon owner marries a fugitive.

Last of the Buccaneers (xx), on 6 at 2:10. A 1950 costume adventure about the swashbuckling pirate Jean Lafitte (Paul Henreid) in the days of the Spanish Main.

Cool Million (xx), on 8 at 2:15. An expensively mounted 1972 television series pilot which served to introduce Jefferson Keyes (James Farentino), a slick operator whose special investigating talents command a fee of $1 million. In this case, Keyes chases all over the European playgrounds of the idle rich trying to locate the long-lost daughter of a prominent millionaire.

Canada In the Running for 1975 Oscar Awards

All the glamor and excitement of Hollywood's most glittering occasion, the annual awards presentations by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, will be brought live to Canadians Tuesday April 8 at 6:00 p.m. on the CBC television network. Masters of Ceremonies are: Bob Hope, Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jr. and Shirley MacLaine.

This year the ceremonies have an added interest for Canadians since three Canadian films are up for awards and two Canadian writers, Mordecai Richler and Lionel Chetwynd, have been nominated in the best adaptation category.

Leading the field for Best Picture are Roman Polanski's Chinatown and Francis Ford Coppola's Godfather — Part II, Towering Inferno, The Conversation, and Lenny. Best Actor nominees are: Jack Nicholson (Chinatown), Al Pacino (Godfather — Part II), Alberta Finney (as Hercule Poirot in Murder on the Orient Express), Dustin Hoffman (Lenny), and Art Carney (Harry and Tonto).

Best Actress nominees: Faye Dunaway (Chinatown), Ellen Burstyn (Alice Doesn't Live Here Any More), Diahann Carroll (Claudine), Valerie Perrine (Lenny), and Gena Rowlands (A Woman Under the Influence).

Best Actor in a Supporting Role: Robert De Niro, Michael V. Gazzo, and Lee Strasberg (Godfather — Part II), Fred Astaire (Towering Inferno), and Jeff Bridges (Thunderbolt and Lightfoot).

Best Actress in a Supporting Role: Ingrid Bergman (Murder on the Orient Express), Valentina Cortese (Day For Night), Madeline Kahn (Blazing Saddles), Diane Ladd (Alice Doesn't Live Here Any More), and Talia Shire (Godfather — Part II).

Best Director: Roman Polanski (Chinatown), Francois Truffault (Day For Night), Francis Ford Coppola (Godfather — Part II), Bob Fosse (Lenny), and John Cassavetes (A Woman Under the Influence).

The three Canadian films in competition are: Hunger (National Film Board), and The Family That Dwelt Apart (NFB) nominated in the best animated shorts category, and The Violin, a 25-minute film by Andrew Welsh and George Plastic nominated in the best live action short film category.

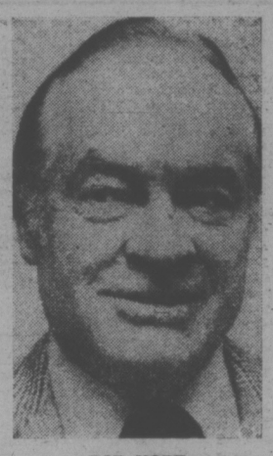
Fifteen Years of Emcee Memories for Comedian

Bob Hope's appearance at the 47th Annual Academy Awards Presentation on Tuesday, April 8, will mark the fifteenth time the comedian has served as a master of ceremonies for the Oscar Show. Sharing emcee honors with Hope this year are Sammy Davis, Jr., Frank Sinatra and Shirley MacLaine.

No one is likely to match Hope's record for at least several years, since his nearest rivals are David Niven and Jerry Lewis, with three appearances each. Davis and Sinatra will be making their second appearance, James Stewart, Jack Lemmon and Jack Benny also appeared twice.

Others who lent their talents over the years are Lawrence Grant, Lionel Barrymore, Will Rogers, Irvin S. Cobb, George Jessel, Bob Burns, Conrad Nagel, Donald O'Conner, Fredric March, Thelma Ritter, Claudette Colbert, Joseph L. Mankiewicz, Celeste Holm, Rosalind Russell, Sir Laurence Olivier, Mort Sahl, Tony Randall, Helen Hayes, Alan King,



BOB HOPE
. . . unrivalled record

Carol Burnett, Michael Caine, Charlton Heston, Rock Hudson, Burt Reynolds, Diana Ross, John Huston and even Donald Duck.

Masters of ceremonies have been an important part of the Awards Presentations since 1931 when actor Lawrence Grant became the first official emcee. Their humor, enthusiasm and spontaneity have sparked the shows and helped make them the success they are.

People still chuckle at the memory of Will Rogers at the 1934 event. Only actresses were nominated that year — May Robson (Lady for a Day), Diana Wynyard (Cavalcade) and Katharine Hepburn (Morning Glory). When the time came for presenting the actress award, Rogers called Miss Robson and Miss Wynyard to his side. Only the year before, Wallace Beery, for The Champ, and Fredric March, for Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, had tied. Was there another dead heat? Rogers kissed the two stars on the cheek, then said, "You both ran good races but the winner is Katharine Hepburn, who couldn't be here this evening."

Other old-timers remember the hit Irvine S. Cobb made at the 1935 affair. The noted humorist opened the proceedings with: "I find myself tonight between actors and producers and I always thought the only thing between them was mutual distrust."

Jack Benny brought down the house one year by saying, "I'm thinking of making a picture without laughs. They tell me I've come close already."

Jerry Lewis scored in each of his three appearances but was particularly funny at the 1956 event. Televiewers still recall Jerrys famous gag when, after an interminable commercial, he said: "And now a brief word from the Academy."

Bob Hope's humorous remarks over the years would fill a book. Only once was the comic without something to say and even then he managed an amusing ad-lib. It happened in 1952 when Hope unexpectedly received an honorary Oscar. Staring at the statuette in his hand, he cracked: "Where are my writers?"

Actor Ends Retirement

LOS ANGELES—George C. Scott has ended the retirement from acting which he announced last year.

CBS said that Scott will star in a two-hour television drama entitled, Fear on Trial. The drama is based on the experiences of John Henry Faulk, an American actor blacklisted for suspected Communist sympathies.

Today's Highlights

ABC Afterschool Special, on 4 at 3:30. Cyrano, an animated version of Edmond Rostand's classic romantic tragedy about the 17th-century soldier-poet Cyrano de Bergerac. The voice of Cyrano is spoken by Jose Ferrer. (60 mins.)

Feeling Good, on 9 at 7. A dramatic monologue about a woman with a drinking problem, read by Oscar winner Estelle Parsons (Bonnie and Clyde), is interwoven with reenacted therapy sessions for recovered alcoholics in tonight's edition of this revamped health series. (30 mins.)

ESTELLE PARSONS
. . . on 9 at 7 p.m.

Hollywood Television Theatre, on 9 at 7:45. Acclaimed actress Cloris Leachman stars in this special presentation of Dorothy Parker and Arnaud d'Usseau's 1953 Broadway play, The Ladies of the Corridor. Set in a fictional residential hotel in Manhattan during the fifties, the drama unfolds as a series of often emotional character studies of the middle-aged lady residents. (2 hrs.)

Atlanticanada, on 2 and 6 at 8. A documentary blend of animation and live footage about the sights, life styles and cultures of Canada's Atlantic provinces, hosted by Max Ferguson, and produced by the National Film Board. (2½ hrs.)

Wide World Special, on 4 at 10:30. Who's News, a show with a feature-magazine format focusing on interviews with celebrities of current interest. Segments include a report on the Academy Awards; interviews with French actress Dominique Sanda, New York Times obituary writer Alden Whitman and British gossip columnist Nigel Dempster. (90 mins.)

Johnny Carson Show, on 5 at 10:30. McLean Stevenson sub-hosts for Johnny tonight, and welcomes among his guests actor Rip Taylor. (90 mins.)

Movies

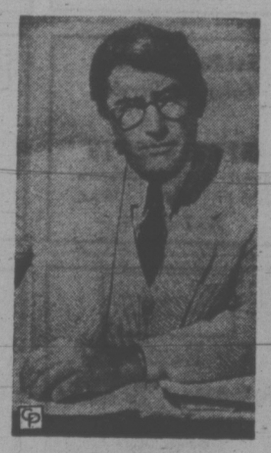
Los Tarantos (xxx), on 11 at noon. Famed Spanish flamenco dancer Carmen Amaya stars in this unusual but entertaining telling of the Romeo and Juliet-West Side Story idea told to the tune of clicking heels and castanets, filmed in Spain in 1964.

Gypsy Girl (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. A poignant 1966 drama highlighted by beautiful English location sites and a sensitive performance by Hayley Mills as a retiring young girl who is looked upon by her village as a trouble maker. John Mills directed his daughter and also obtains a fine performance from Ian McShane in the role of a gypsy lad who saves Hayley from being sent to a mental home.

Secret Mission (xx), on 5 at 2:30. A 1944 British spy drama with excellent actors (James Mason, Stewart Granger and Michael Wilding) making the most of the intrigue.



GREGORY PECK
. . . on 2 at Midnight

The Story of Pretty Boy Floyd, on 4 at 7:30. No rating available on this 1974 made-for-television drama starring Martin Sheen as the Depression-era farmboy who became an infamous bank robber and killer.

Oliver! (xxxx), on 8 at 8. Five Academy Awards went to this wonderful 1968 British-made musical, directed by Carol Reed. With an assist from Charles Dickins and some new dialogue and songs by Lionel Bart, director Reed has given new life to the classic Dickins' tale about the luckless orphan Oliver Twist. Mark Lester, playing Oliver is most appealing, and the role of Fagin (minus the anti-Semitic implications of the original story) is acted with great relish by Ron Moody. Standouts in a fine supporting cast include Shani Wallis as Nancy and Jack Wild as the Artful Dodger. Recommended.

Saadia (x), on 11 at 8. A muddled 1954 melodrama, set in Morocco about three people who wage a war against plague and a belief in black magic, starring Rita Gam, Mel Ferrer and Cornel Wilde.

The Jerusalem File (xx), on 7 at 10:45. Superb photography highlights this otherwise naive 1972 story about student idealism working to solve the Arab-Israeli turmoil. Donald Pleasence and Nicol Williamson offer the best characterizations but the real star is Raoul Coutard's cinematography (he also did "Z"), which breathes time and place into this symplistic tale.

I'll Take Sweden (xx), on 12 at 11:30. For Bob Hope fans only, a 1964 comedy about an oil executive who transfers to Sweden to get his daughter away from her boyfriend. Supporting cast includes Tuesday Weld and Frankie Avalon.

To Kill a Mockingbird (xxxx), on 2 at midnight. An acclaimed, Oscar-winning 1962 film rendering of Harper Lee's Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, combining racial prejudice in the Deep South with the maturing of two youngsters being brought up by their widowed father, a fair-minded and sensitive lawyer. As the father, Gregory Peck has never been better, and the two youngsters (Mary Badham and Phillip Alford) are superb. Heartwarming and powerful, the film has been described as "one of the best movies dealing with race relations that the American film industry has ever made." Absolutely worth staying up for.

By Love Possessed (xx), on 6 at 2:10. Efrem Zimbalist Jr. and Lana Turner star in this 1961 romantic soap opera about a lawyer who has an affair with his crippled partner's wife.

The Judge and Jake Wyler (xx), on 8 at 2:10. A 1972 pilot for an unsold television series about a lady judge (Bette Davis) who runs a detective agency from her fortress-like home. Although Miss Davis has top billing, it's really Doug McClure's show, in the role of an ex-con working for Judge Davis.

Famed Cartoon Voice Still Going Strong

By TOM SHALES

WASHINGTON — When Mel Blanc was crawling out of a coma 14 years ago, Bugs Bunny crawled out with him. For 21 years, Blanc had been the voice of Bugs. Some of the other cartoon characters he does go back even further than that. But he hadn't realized how much a part of him they were until after an auto accident and three unconscious weeks in a hospital.

"It was a very bad accident," said Blanc in a Washington hotel suite. "I made the obit column in Honolulu, that's how bad it was.

"Now my wife and son swear to this story, but to me it sounds incredible. They say that while I was unconscious, the doctor would come into my room each day and ask me how I was and, nothing. I wouldn't answer him. So one day he comes into my room, he gets an idea, and he says, 'Hey, Bugs Bunny! How are you?' And they say I answered back in Bugs' voice, 'Ehh, just fine, Doc, how are you?'

"Then he said, 'and Porky Pig! How you feeling?' and I said: 'J-j-j-just fine, th-th-th thanks.'

"So you see, I actually live these characters."

To millions of people, the characters actually live, thanks largely to Blanc's "voice characterizations," as the old cartoon credits called them. Warner Bros. shut down its cartoon units in the late '50s, but that has not stilled the voices of Bugs, Porky, Sylvester, Tweetie Pie, Daffy Duck, Elmer Fudd, Yosemite Sam and others. Blanc was the voice for all of them and, except for Fudd, created all the voices himself.

He is touring now to promote a new toy, the Bugs Bunny Birthday Call kit, which costs five bucks and works like this: Parent buys kit, fills in postcard with child's name and birthday, mails it at least a week ahead of time and then gets to witness a telephone call from Bugs to the child on the kid's birthday.

Bugs Bunny

It is a prerecorded message, of course, Blanc spent few days last summer recording 2,500 voices to be dropped in according to the name on the card. The promoters of this say they've tried to include all possible names — including "Jose and" "Jesus" — but in the event of a Pierpont or a Eulalia, a nonpersonalized message is available. The promoters also say that in a test marketing the gimmick, they found that 35 per cent of the birthday calls were being made to adults, not children.

Thus does the unflappable rabbit's longevity continue. This pleases Blanc, who has always been partial to Bugs, and in his speaking engagements on college campuses, Blanc finds Bugs is the people's favorite as well. "He's a little stinker, that's why people love him. He does what most people would like to do but don't have the guts to do."

Blanc is a rather short man and, at present, a 66-year-old one. Living comfortably in Pacific Palisades, with his wife, Estelle, has given him a handsome California tan. He can still remember the first voice he ever did for a cartoon when he finally got a job with Leon Schlesinger Productions in 1937. The company eventually became the Warners cartoon studio.

"I kept coming in looking for a job, and this fellow kept saying, 'Sorry, we have all the voices we need.' Eventually he died, so I tried again. They said, 'Can you do a drunken bull?' and I said, 'Sure,' and I did it."

The first major character Blanc did was the stammering Porky Pig. "No, it's not a stammer, really," corrected Blanc. "It's just an oink. It grew out of the way a pig grunts. It's like a pig actually would talk."

Bugs, originally to be called The Happy Rabbit, first peeked out of a hole in the 1940 cartoon "A Wild Hare," and the spunky nature of the little critter was quick to catch on.

"Well, I thought, when we were working on how Bugs would talk, which accent sounds the toughest — Brooklyn or the Bronx? I couldn't make up my mind, so I made his voice a combination of both. Originally they wanted him to say, 'Hey, what's cookin'?' but I said, 'Why don't we be modern about this?' At the time, 'What's up, Doc?' was a very popular expression. So I suggested that Bugs use it."

The immortal Tweetie Pie, a smart-alecky young canary who taunts Sylvester the cat, came along in 1944 and contributed to the annals of colloquialism the phrase, "I tawt I taw a putty tat." Sylvester's voice was easy enough, Blanc said. "He was just a big sloppy cat, so of course he would say, 'SSSSSuffering SSSSSuccotash!"

Contrary to what you might think, Blanc said the voicing always came first with the cartoons, then the drawing. And, yes, the guys in the cartoon units — Chuck Jones, Tex Avery, Robert McKimson and the others — were a crazy gang.

"Oh, they were nuts! I used to just do my voices and then get the hell out. I'd walk into their office and there they'd be, one guy bent over another, both of them wearing German helmets, and another ready to hit one of them over the head with an axe! They had to act out the cartoons as they wrote them."

During the years he was most of the cast of some 3,000 cartoons, Blanc was also a regular on the Jack Benny radio and television programs. Benny hired him to do the growl of Carmichael, the bear who guarded his underground vault. After six months of growling, Blanc said to Benny, "You know, Jack, I can also talk," and led to the roles of Benny's sassy parrot ("Cheapskate!") the ever-expiring Maxwell Motor and the railway station announcer whose list of infinestimal Claifornia burgs would always end with "KOOKamunga."

Those were great years.

CLORIS LEACHMAN stars in a special television production of Dorothy Parker and Arnaud d'Usseau's 1953 Broadway play, Ladies of the Corridor, to be telecast on Channel 9's Hollywood TV Theatre series on Wednesday at 7:45 p.m.

OLIVER! — On Wednesday at 8 p.m. on Channel 8, CTV will re-telecast the Academy Award-winning 1968 musical, starring Mark Lester (left) in the title role, and Jack Wild (right) as the Artful Dodger. It's an entertaining, tune-filled version of Charles Dickens classic tale set in 19th-century London, where a 9-year-old innocent falls in with a gang of street urchins, led by the cunning, incorrigible Fagin.

SHOULD GAMBLING BE LEGALIZED?

Gambling, say the sociologists, fulfills man's old hunting instinct with money as the trophy, but unfortunately 99% of us lose. Honore Balzac called gambling a passion that lurks in every heart, suggesting shameful desire, yet correspondent Michael Maclear finds that notion undergoing a change as he examines big time gambling in the next re-telecast of Maclear entitled The Biggest Gamble Of Them All, airing Thursday, April 10, 9:30-10:00 p.m. on the CTV Television Network.

The amount of money spent on gambling in Canada, the United States and Britain is phenomenal. Illegal betting alone in the U.S. adds up to fifty billion dollars a year. If it was taxed at the same rate as in the state of Nevada, the resulting payments would cover the cost of the welfare and education budgets of all the states. Britain's tax revenues on dog and horse racing are two hundred and fifty million dollars while the revenue for offtrack betting amounts to six hundred million dollars.

When Canadians take off for their favourite gambling spots in Las Vegas they drop twenty million dollars a year. The biggest drawback in completely legalizing gambling is the association of big time crime and gambling, an association that sparks the controversy. It is forcing Governments to either suppress gambling or take over with stringent controls.

The argument now is that you can't change human nature, so let the tax man exploit it. At the First Annual Conference on Gambling, On Cause and Effect, the advice to Governments was not whether to legalize or not but how to do it most profitably. Legalization could yet become the most costly gamble of them all.

Today's Highlights

ABC Afternoon Playbreak, on 4 at 12:30. Can I Save My Children?, a repeat telecast of the drama about a mother and her two children who crash-land in a wilderness area that is due to be flooded for a lake. Diane Baker stars. (90 mins.)

Bill Moyers Journal: International Report, 9 at 7. Host Bill Moyers honors International Women's Year, with this report on the status of women throughout the world. (60 mins.)

They Search for Survival, on 11 at 7:30. A documentary exploring the plight of refugees in Bangladesh, Cambodia and Africa's Sahel region, with Art Linkletter and Dr. Stan Mooneyham, president of World Vision International. (60 mins.)

Of Pure Blood, on 9 at 8:30. Nazi Germany's efforts to breed a "master race" are detailed in this report focusing on the plan begun by SS chief Heinrich Himmler in 1935 to persuade German women to mate with his elite troops. Also, Himmler's plan is shown to have called for the abduction of children from conquered nations so that those who were deemed to be racially "pure" would be raised in Germany. This documentary includes interviews with witnesses, SS officers and kidnap victims. (1 hr. 40 mins.)

Maclear, on 8 at 9:30. The Greatest Gamble of Them All, a repeat of host-correspondent Michael Maclear's examination of whether gambling should be legalized and the social implications of such legislation. (30 mins.)

Wide World Special, on 4 at 10:30. A preview of director Peter Bogdanovich's new musical, At Long Last Love. Host George Hamilton talks with celebrities at the premiere and post-premiere party, including the film's stars Cybill Shepherd and Burt Reynolds, Liza and Vincente Minnelli, Dinah Shore, Ann Miller and Bogdanovich. Mara of the Wilderness, on 11 at noon. No rating available on this 1965 outdoor adventure about a girl raised by wolves, who discovers a new world when she saves the life of an anthropologist. Cast includes Linda Saunders and Adam West.

Magic Carpet (xx), on 8 at 12:45. A scenic 1972 tour of Italy with Susan Saint James leading a disgruntled group of tourists, including Jim Backus, Nanette Fabray and Abby Dalton, on a European holiday.

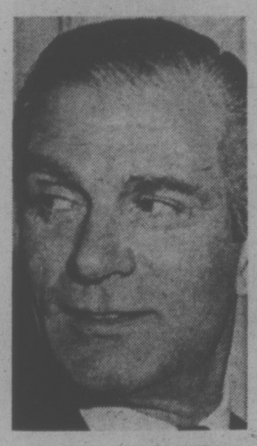
Conspiracy of Terror, on 7 at 7. An unpreviewed 1965 comedy-drama pilot for a proposed series about the cases and complications in the lives of a husband-and-wife detective team, starring Michael Constantine and Barbara Rhoades.

Wuthering Heights (xxxx), on 7 at 8. Sir Laurence Olivier secured his place at the top of the acting world with his flawless performance in this superb 1939 film rendering of Emily Bronte's romantic classic about the tragic love affair between a materialistic young woman (well played by Merle Oberon) and a proud stableboy. Olivier is the epitome of the mysterious, dashing Heathcliff and Miss Oberon is excellent in the role of his love, Cathy. Brilliantly directed by William Wyler with a fine supporting cast that includes David Niven and Geraldine Fitzgerald. Recommended.

A Matter of Wife . . . and Death, on 5 at 8:30. An unpreviewed 1975 pilot for a proposed series starring Rod Taylor as a rugged detective on the trail of a killer responsible for the bombing murder of an old friend. Canadian actor John Colicos is featured in the supporting cast.

Requiem for a Gunfighter (x), on 11 at 8:30. A threadbare 1965 western with a cast of veteran heavies (Rod Cameron, Stephen McNally and Tim McCoy) the only attractive point.



LAURENCE OLIVIER
. . . on 7 at 8 p.m.

Incident in San Francisco (xx), on 12 at 9:30. Christopher Connelly and Richard Kiley star in this slick 1972 unsold pilot for a proposed series about a big city newspaper. Connelly plays a brash young reporter who gets deeply involved in the plight of a man who accidentally caused the death of a young criminal while coming to the aid of an old man.

The Traveling Executive, on 7 at 10:45. No rating available on this 1970 black comedy about a con artist (Stacy Keach) on the Southern prison circuit in 1918.

Seven Seas to Calais (xx), on 12 at 11:30. A 1961 Italian-made costume adventure about England's struggle for supremacy of the seas in 1577. Cast includes Irene Worth as Queen Elizabeth, Rod Taylor as Sir Frances Drake and Keith Mitchell.

Castle Keep (xx), on 6 at midnight. Burt Lancaster, Peter Falk and Patrick O'Neal star in this 1969 Second World War drama about American occupation of a strategic Belgian castle where a great many art treasures are kept.

13 Rue Madeleine (xxx), on 8 at midnight. James Cagney stars in this 1947 semi-documentary spy story about a top Gestapo agent who goes undercover in an American agent-training school.

John Meade's Woman, on 7 at 12:35. No rating available on this 1937 drama about the wife of a lumber tycoon who starts a revolt by the farmers he cheated, starring Francine Larrimore and Edward Arnold.

Darling (xxxx), on 2 at 1. Julie Christie won an Academy Award for her excellent performance in this perceptive, cynical and deftly-written 1965 portrait of a London model who decides to climb the social ladder two steps at a time. An honest and often amusing comment on the manners, morals and mores of our time, brilliantly directed by John Schlesinger and co-starring Laurence Harvey and Dirk Bogarde.

Stage to Tucson (x), on 6 at 2:15. Another routine western, this one made in 1950 about an agent investigating a series of stagecoach thefts, starring Rod Cameron.

PAINSTAKING DOCUMENTARY

Breeding The 'Master Race'

Victims of the Nazi, Lebensborn (Fountain of Life) breeding program tell their story in a special, carefully researched documentary — Of Pure Blood — airing April 10 at 8:30 p.m. on KCTS-9.

Lebensborn was instituted by SS Chief Heinrich Himmler in 1935 when he called upon every German woman to "give a child to the Fuehrer." Pregnant women who could prove their Aryan ancestry and the Aryan descent of the father were put into SS controlled homes, where they were given excellent medical treatment, good food, and pleasant surroundings. The children they produced would be part of the Aryan "superrace." The homes were highly secret; there were no christenings, and local authorities were never notified of the 50-100,000 births.

During the war, the SS also kidnapped "nordic" looking children, taking them from their homes in occupied countries and placing them with German families. In one incident, a Bohemian village was razed, the men shot and the women sent to concentration camps. Of the 90 children between the ages of 1 and 16, eight were chosen for Lebensborn and sent to German families. The rest were sent to the gas chambers.

In Poland alone, 80 per cent of the 200,000 kidnapped children never returned. They disappeared into Germany. Today many of them are German citizens, afraid to ask too many questions about their pasts. Many who discover their real background find the recollections too painful to face. Others have rejected their origins with contempt.

Two reporters, British born Clarissa Henry and her French husband Marc Hillel have spent three years tracing these "Germanized" children and their parents. "Of Pure Blood" is the result of their painstaking research.

MEASURING UP — The story of the Nazi's Lebensborn breeding program in which "Nordic" children were declared "of pure blood" and admitted to the program, will be told in a carefully researched documentary to be telecast on Thursday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 9. Shown here are East European children in a German-occupied country being measured for "Nordic" characteristics.

Award-Winning Cast Featured In Four Original Mini-Plays

COMEDY SPECIAL — On Thursday at 9 p.m. on Channel 4, ABC-TV presents Happy Endings, four original playlets by Neil Simon, Jules Feiffer, Herb Gardner and Peter Stone, and featuring an award-winning cast, which includes Lauren Bacall and Robert Preston (below), Alan King (above) and Art Carney.

Lauren Bacall, Art Carney, James Earl Jones and Robert Preston star with Alan King in the ABC Television Network comedy special, Happy Endings, a presentation of four original plays by four major playwrights — Jules Feiffer, Herb Gardner, Neil Simon and Peter Stone. The special will be broadcast Thursday, April 10 (9:00-10:00 p.m.).

Stage and screen actress Elizabeth Wilson and Broadway actor John Cunningham join the star-studded cast of this production, which also features the singing voice of Anthony Newley.

Ms. Bacall, who can currently be seen in the motion picture hit, "Murder on the Orient Express," makes a rare television appearance in this special. In a play by Peter Stone entitled "A Commercial Break," she portrays Commissioner of Consumer Affairs Catherine Crocker who is married to a very successful advertising man, Harry, played by Robert Preston. A marital problem arises when their jobs interfere with their relationship.

Art Carney, who has received an Oscar nomination for his role in Harry and Tonto, is the escape-seeking father of a family whose members fail to communicate with each other in Jules Feiffer's Kidnapped. His wife, Edna, is played by Elizabeth Wilson, who is presently in the newly released film, Prisoner of Second Avenue. She also appeared in the movie version of Feiffer's Little Murders. The children, Penny and Buddy, are played by Lisa Rochelle and Jimmy Fields.

James Earl Jones stars with Alan King in the Neil Simon play, Big Joe and Kansas. They are two derelicts who spend their time dreaming about and waiting for the good times. Jones is Big Joe, the planner who fancies himself above his current status and who has the higher aspirations of the two. King plays Kansas, an ex-fighter who has seen too many fights. Jones recently finished a Broadway run as Lennie in Of Mice and Men and will now star again in the role at the John F. Kennedy Centre in Washington, D.C., for a brief engagement.

In I'm With Ya, Duke by Herb Gardner, King stars as Sam Margolis, a 78-year-old Russian Jew who wakes up in a hospital and finds that he needs heart surgery to stay alive. A funny, angry, cantankerous old man, he does not want the operation and explains why to a young doctor. He feels that his heart just found out what he already knew: "It's enough . . . these times, ain't my time." The doctor is played by John Cunningham, currently appearing on the daytime television series, Search for Tomorrow." He has also appeared in numerous Broadway shows, including 1776, Company and Zorba. Nancy Andrews plays a nurse in the Gardner play.

Alan King will also act as stage manager for the program, offering his observations on the plays.

Musical Friendship

ACCLAIMED DRAMA REPEATED ON CTV

Maurice Solway, the noted classical violinist, returns to CTV in the Academy Award nominated production of The Violin, airing Tuesday, April 8, 8:00-8:30 p.m.

This Critically acclaimed production follows the adventures of two young boys who, after carting their pennies to a small shop, find they haven't enough to purchase the violin they wanted. The storekeeper finds them a substitute instrument, old and battered, and they return to their island home with it.

The older boy's attempts at producing music succeeds in driving his younger brother to distraction. Disheartened, the older lad throws the violin away, but it is surreptitiously resurrected by a tattered itinerant musician who actually draws sweet tones and music from deep inside the violin.

Attracted by his music, the enchanted boys join the old man at his cluttered cottage where the three grow to be friends. Through the winter the musician finds a student in the older boy and he teaches him well.

Ready to move on again in the spring, the old man assures himself the youngster is capable of playing, then packs and starts his journey — but not before a tragic accident leaves the battered old violin smashed beyond repair.

Wondering whether he was doing the right thing or not, the old man leaves his own precious violin to replace the damaged one. It is only as he is leaving, burdened with his memories and paraphenalia that he hears the strains of music, and knows his decision was right.

Today's Highlights

Comedy Special, on 7 at 7 and 12 at 8. Rosenthal and Jones, a pilot for a proposed series about two elderly men — one Jewish and one black — who would rather overcome their differences and live together than be dependent upon their domineering children. Ned Class and George Kirby star. (30 mins.)

LYNN REDGRAVE
. . . on 9 at 8:05 p.m.

Masterpiece Theatre, on 9 at 8:05. The Spring Sonata, the final story in the series Vienna 1900 — Games of Love and Death, stars Lynn Redgrave as a young widow whose dreams of a past musical career and romance are fulfilled when she hears from a former lover. (Beginning next week, Lord Peter Wimsey returns in a new four-part mystery, The Nine Tailors.) (60 mins.)

The 2000 Year Old Man, on 7 at 9:30. A repeat telecast of the delightful animated tongue-in-cheek interview with "the oldest living man", with voices and script by Mel Brooks and Carl Reiner. (30 mins.)

Rhoda, on 2 at 10. The whole cast of the Mary Tyler Moore show appears in this repeat of the hour-long episode, Rhoda's Wedding. It's full of complications and sentiment highlighted by a hilarious sequence of Rhoda (Valerie Harper) in full bridal regalia taking the subway to her own wedding. (60 mins.)

Wide World in Concert, on 4 at 10.30. Last in a series of four shows from Nashville's Grand Ole Opry House featuring Charlie Pride, Dolly Parton, Jerry Reed and Chet Atkins. (90 mins.)

Johnny Carson Show, on 5 at 10:30. Rich Little sub-hosts for Johnny tonight. (90 mins.)

Movies

A Face in the Rain (xxx), on 11 at noon. A suspenseful, well-made 1963 melodrama about a Second World War American soldier sheltered from the enemy by the mistress of a German commandant, starring Rory Calhoun and Marina Berti.

The Movie Murderer (xx), on 8 at 12:45. Arthur Kennedy stars in this fairly interesting 1970 drama about an insurance investigator who sets out to find the arsonist responsible for destroying movie films.

The Millionairess (xxx), on 5 at 2:30. George Bernard Shaw's comedy about a millionairess and her pursuit of happiness and true love reached the screen somewhat diluted in this 1960 movie, but Sophia Loren and Peter Sellers keep the comedy moving. It's not top-drawer Shaw but it's entertaining nevertheless.

Kate McShane, on 7 at 8. The distaff side of the talented comedy team of Stiller and Meara, Anne Meara, takes on a dramatic role in this 1975 pilot for a proposed crime-drama series. Miss Meara plays the title role, a warm-hearted Irish lawyer whose family helps her with her work, and in this case, she fights to reduce the charge against her client from murder to manslaughter.

ANNE MEARA
. . . on 7 at 8 p.m.

OSS 177 — Mission for a Killer, on 11 at 8. No rating available on this 1966 French-made espionage drama set in Rio de Janeiro, about a secret agent trying to stop an assassination plot.

Birdman of Alcatraz (xxxx), on 12 at 9. A flawless performance by Burt Lancaster highlights this gripping 1962 drama that tells the true-life story of convict Robert Stroud, who became an expert on birdlife while serving time for murder. Stroud's complex personality is examined superbly by director John Frankenheimer, and a fine supporting cast includes Karl Malden, Thelma Ritter and Telly Savalas.

The Monolith Monsters (xx), on 7 at 10:45. Standard science-fiction thriller, filmed in 1957, about strange deaths that occur after a meteor shatters in the California desert.

Do Not Disturb (xx), on 12 at 11:55. An overly-cute 1965 Doris Day romantic comedy about the European misadventures of the wife of an American businessman, played by Rod Taylor.

BURT LANCASTER
. . . on 12 at 9 p.m.

The Ten Commandments (xxx), on 6 at midnight. Cecil B. DeMille's massive 1956 Biblical spectacle, featuring great special effects, a cast of thousands and Charlton Heston as Moses.

Journey to the Far Side of the Sun, on 8 at midnight. No rating available on this 1969 science-fiction adventure about strange events that occur when astronauts return from a trip to a new planet. Roy Thinnes stars.

The Missing Guest, on 7 at 12:15. No rating available on this 1938 mystery about a reporter investigating a haunted house.

Nightmare (xx), on 7 at 1:40. Brian Donlevy and Diana Barrymore star in this 1942 suspense tale about a gambler who stumbles into a murder, and finds himself involved in an espionage ring.

Brock's Last Case (xxx), on 8 at 2:05. Richard Widmark stars in this 1973 crime-drama pilot for the short-lived television series, Madigan, about a New York detective quitting the force to raise oranges in California, who ends up trying to clear his Indian foreman of murder. The direction, script and performances are all good.

8:03 (AM) CBC Tuesday Night — Part 1: Talks With My Friends — A series of conversations conducted Moelwyn Merchant, sculptor, poet, scholar and critic and master-teacher who heads the English and Fine Arts Department at the University of Exeter. They are designed to reveal the nature of the creative process as it manifests itself in the life and work of six internationally acclaimed artists. Merchant, who is also a canon of Salisbury Cathedral, explores the ways in which their art and other disciplines relate, the influences that have shaped their lives and the way relationships, circumstances and experiences inform and guide career choices.

Part 2: The Huggett Family of Ottawa — Singing and performing Renaissance music, using such ancient instruments as the Krumhorn, rauchpfeiffe, recorders and viols.

Part 3: A documentary on the Supreme Court of Canada commemorates the 100th year of the Supreme Court. (The actual anniversary is April 5). Ottawa freelance broadcaster Elizabeth Gray researched, prepared and narrates this documentary which takes a look at the historic and human interest aspects of the institution, examining what the Supreme Court is and what it means to most people. Ms Gray talks with court critics, lawyers and people who have sat on the court. Among those heard are Chief Justice Bora Laskin, the Hon. Mr. Justice William Morrow, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the Northwest Territories; the Hon. Emmett Hall, J. J. Robinette, Arthur Maloney, Brian Purdy and Dean Harry Arthurs of Osgoode Hall.

10:30 (AM) Touch the Earth — A feature on singer-songwriter Robbie McNeil of Nova Scotia.

WEDNESDAY

6:30 (FM) Talent Festival Finals Recital — Each finalist in the CBC's Talent Festival Competition presents an appropriate recital before the final judging.

8:03 (AM) — India. A series of four stories. 1. An interview with Maharajah Kumar Ravinder of Jind, a young man adhering to the family traditions. His father was the last officially crowned Maharajah in 1947 with the State of Jind having 265,000 loyal servant subjects. 2. A look at P. Mani Bushman, a 14-year-old runaway street urchin in Goa. Mani is destined for the streets of Bombay where, if he's lucky he'll live past 25. 3. An interview with Winston Cedric Gawke, a famous retired Shikari, or big game hunter, who took out princes and kings and rich men on Safari. 4. An interview with Sofia Wadia, head of the English literature department in Bombay. As a young girl, Sofia knew both Mahatma Gandhi and the great Sir Rabindranath Tagore, the Shelley of India. Also, "Parsis"—a look at Parsiism, one of the great religions of the world.

10:03 (FM) Ideas — Intentional Communities: Experiments in Alternative Life Styles — Past, present and future, and across cultures.

10:30 (AM) Country Road — Hosts Frank Cameron and Vic Mullen present ninety minutes of the best in country and western music. This week's program will include a performance by Doug Bell and the Goldstrikers with Teresa Clarey.

THURSDAY

8:03 (AM) Themes and Variations — Part I — Karl-Ulrich and Helen Schanbel, piano, four hands. Part II — Helene Gagne, cello; Robert Vignoles, pinao.

9:00 (FM) Encore — (Note new time this occasion, due to scheduling of the Talent Festival Finals' Recitals presentation). A documentary on the Supreme Court of Canada commemorates the 100th year of the Supreme Court. (The actual anniversary is April 5). Ottawa freelance broadcaster Elizabeth Gray researched, prepared and narrates this documentary which takes a look at the historic and human interest aspects of the institution, examining what the Supreme Court is and what it means to most people. Ms. Gray talks with court critics, lawyers and people who have sat on the court. Among those heard are Chief Justice Bora Laskin, the Hon. Mr. Justice William Morrow, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the Northwest Territories; the Hon. Emmett Hall, J. J. Robinette, Arthur Maloney; Brian Purdy; and Dean Harry Arthurs of Osgoode Hall.

10:03 (FM) Ideas — Intentional Communities: Experiments in alternative lifestyles: Past, present and future, and across cultures.

10:30 (AM) Jazz Radio Canada — Concerts by the Oliver Gannon Quartet from Vancouver and the Russ Little Band from Toronto. Also, Vancouver freelancer Sonny Lewis talks about pianist-composer Mary Lou Williams.

FRIDAY

2:03 (AM) Canadian Schools Broadcast — The Matter of the Metre — a five-part series of programs designed to help students appreciate the Metric system. And, Inuit Legends, a five-part series which attempts to combine the real life and culture of the Eskimo with the legends which are remembered by contemporary native peoples.

8:03 (AM) Talent Festival Finals—The finalists are presented in concert from Montreal. Presentation of the awards will take place at approximately 10:15 p.m.

9:03 (FM) The Bush and the Salon—Almighty Voice, a documentary theatre piece conceived by Clarke Rogers and created by members of Toronto's Theatre Passe Muraille. It tells the story of a young Cree Indian who became a fugitive from the law and whose last stand on a bluff near Duck Lake, Sask., gave birth to a legend. The original Toronto cast stars Diane D'Aquila, Thomas Hauff, Hardee T. Lineham and Richard Moffatt.

10:30 (AM) Major Progression — A weekly 90-minute rock music show from Winnipeg. The program will have a variety of features covering almost every aspect of the music scene and will feature to a high degree music by Canadian artists. There will be a weekly billboard of musical events with information about the major concerts across the country; reviews of new record albums; and interviews with musical personalities. The program will also have commentaries on various aspects of the music industry; record companies and publishers; and how a record is promoted to hit status. Hosts: Jim Millican and Lee Major.

LIFE OF JANE AUSTEN

CBC Features Drama By Local Author

Jane, a piece of theatre based on the life, letters and literature of Jane Austen, the famous novelist whose bicentenary is celebrated this year, is the feature of CBC's FM radio program Monday Evening commending at 8 p.m., April 7.

It is written by Joan Mason-Hurley, the Victoria playwright who is herself related to Jane Austen. Her great-grandfather, James Edward Austen-Leigh, was a nephew of the novelist.

Playing the part of Jane is the British Columbia actress Trist Grange. The narrator is Michael Franks and the cast includes two Victoria actors Anthony Jenkins and Patricia Wainman-Wood. Also playing a variety of roles is a Vancouver cast including Patricia Williams, Marlene Dixon, Audrey Kniveton, Peter Haworth and Roy Brinson.

The broadcast includes dramatized exerpts from the major novels, including Pride and Prejudice and her last completed work Persuasion. The production in the Vancouver studios of the CBC is directed by Robert Chesterman. The technical engineer is Don Hardisty.

JOAN MASON-HURLEY
. . . related to novelist

Joan Mason-Hurley has had over a dozen stage plays produced and has won seven prizes for playwriting in British Columbia. This is her third script produced by the CBC.
